PROVIDENT FUNDS ACT, 1925 (XIX OF 1925)

Statement of Objects and Reasons¹

The Provident Funds Act at present provides that any sums standing to the credit of depositors in Provident Funds to which the Act applies after the death of the depositor and which are payable under the rules of the Fund, to the widow or children of the deceased shall vest in such widow or children. Such sums do not, therefore, form part of the estate of the deceased and the interests of the widow or children are thereby fully protected. It is considered that this provision is unduly restrictive and that the same degree of protection should be accorded to other dependants of the deceased besides his widow and children. Otherwise, the accumulations of a depositor, who dies before such accumulations are disbursed to him, may be held to be liable to meet the debts of the deceased and the object of the Provident Fund in question may be frustrated.

2. The Act protects compulsory deposits in a Provident Fund from attachments but not from assignments which may have been made to take effect on the depositor's retirement or on his death. On the other hand, the rules regulating the General Provident Fund, which is one of the most important funds to which the Act applies, provide that Government will not be bound by or recognise assignment or encumbrance executed or attempted to be created which affects the disposal of the accumulations of a depositor who dies before retirement. The validity of this provision is open to question. It is considered that in order to give effect to the object for which Provident Funds have been constituted, it should be made clear that with certain exceptions, in spite of debts, liabilities, assignments or any form of encumbrance, the depositor, on retirement or his dependants or nominees, if he dies before retirement or after retirement but before actual disbursement should receive in tact the accumulations at his credit in the fund. The exceptions proposed to this provision are as follows:—(i) The rights of third parties obtained before the proposed amendment comes into operation should be protected and (ii) in case of contributory Provident Funds, the authority by which the fund was constituted should be entitled to withhold amounts not exceeding the total contributions made by the authority and the interest or increment on such contributions, if those amounts are due to the authority under a liability incurred by the depositor or if the depositor is dismissed from the authority's employment or resigns his employment within five years of the commencement thereof.

3. Again, under the Act as it stands, apart from the amounts which vest in the widow or children of a depositor, the disbursement of the accumulations in a fund at the time of the death of a depositor is impossible if the total assets exceed Rs. 2,000/- without the production of probate or letters of administration or a succession certificate. It is considered desirable to permit such disbursement of the accumulations if the amount does not exceed Rs. 5,000/- instead of Rs. 2,000/- as at present. A corresponding provision is contained in the Government Savings Bank Act under which the amount of a deposit which can be disbursed in this manner is Rs. 3,000/- as compared with Rs. 1,000/- before the Act was amended in 1917. Similarly under the Indian Securities Act, 1920, on the death of a person who was entitled to a Government security or securities, the prescribed officer may now determine who is the person entitled to the security or securities, if they do not in the aggregate exceed Rs. 5,000/- without the production of the probate, letters of administration or a succession certificate.

4. It has further been considered desirable to provide definitely in the Act for the rights of nominees and also to indicate that a deposit is compulsory deposit within the meaning of the Act and continues to be so for so long as it remains in the hands of the administrators of the fund despite the existence of an option permitting withdrawal from the fund on the condition that the amount withdrawn shall be expended on the taking out of, or on contributions towards, an insurance policy.

5. In order to give effect to these suggestions and also to certain other minor points, it is considered desirable to amend the existing Act and to re-enact it in a consolidated form.

58A. Definitions.—In this Chapter, unless there is anything repugnant in the subject or context,—

- (a) a “recognised provident fund” means a provident fund which has been and continues to be recognised by the Commissioner, in accordance with the provisions of this Chapter;

³⁹ Entry “34. The N. W. F. Province Branch of the Indian Red Cross Society” rep. by the A. O. 1948.

⁴¹ Added by Notification No. S.R.O. 240 dated the 24th January, 1956.

¹ This Chapter was inserted in the Indian Income-tax Act, 1922 by s. 5 of the Indian Income-tax (Provident Funds Relief) Act, 1929 (XII of 1929). Statement of Objects and Reasons of Act XII of 1929—“The object of this Bill is to give as far as possible the

(b) an "employer" means—

- (i) a Hindu undivided family, company, firm or other association of 2* * persons, or
- (ii) an individual engaged in a business, profession or vocation whereof the profits and gains are assessable to income-tax under section 10, 3* * maintaining a provident fund for the benefit of his or its employees;
- (c) an "employee" means an employee participating in a provident fund, but does not include a personal or domestic servant;
- (d) a "contribution" means any sum credited by or on behalf of any employee out of his salary, or by an employer out of his own monies, to the individual account of an employee, but does not include any sum credited as interest;
- (e) the "balance to the credit" of an employee means the total amount to the credit of his individual account in a provident fund at any time;
- (f) the "annual accretion" to the balance to the credit of an employee means the increase to such balance in any year, arising from contributions and interest;
- (g) the "accumulated balance due" to an employee means the balance to his credit, or such portion thereof as may be claimable by him under the regulations of the fund, on the day he ceases to be an employee of the employer maintaining the fund; and

same relief in respect of income-tax to contributions made to private provident funds maintained by commercial and other employers as is now given in respect of life insurance premia. This concession is proposed to be given in order to encourage thrift.

2. Broadly speaking, the form that the concession will take is that of exemption from income-tax of contributions made both by the employer and the employee in so far as these contributions do not exceed one-sixth of the employees' salary. It is to be noted that it is not intended to double the total relief which can be claimed by individual, and if a subscriber to a provident fund is also paying an annual life insurance premium, he will only be entitled to claim income-tax relief in respect of the latter to the extent that the joint contributions to the provident fund fall short of one-sixth of his total income. The concession will be restricted to provident funds which are subject to irrevocable trusts and otherwise conform to the conditions laid down in this Bill." ⁵[(3A) An order according recognition to a provident fund shall not, unless the Commissioner otherwise directs, be affected by the fact that the fund is subsequently amalgamated with another provident fund on the occurrence of an amalgamation of the undertakings in connection with which the two funds are maintained, or that it subsequently absorbs the whole or a part of another provident fund belonging to an undertaking which is wholly or in part transferred to or merged in the undertaking of the employer maintaining the first mentioned fund.]

(3) The Central Board of Revenue shall communicate in writing to the trustees of the fund any withdrawal of approval with the reasons for such withdrawal and the date on which the withdrawal is to take effect.

(4) The Central Board of Revenue shall neither refuse nor withdraw approval to any superannuation fund or any part of a superannuation fund unless it has given the trustees of that fund a reasonable opportunity of being heard in the matter.

58P. Conditions for approval.—In order that a superannuation fund may receive and retain approval the following conditions shall be satisfied, namely:—

- (a) the fund shall be a fund established under an irrevocable trust in connection with a trade or undertaking carried on in ²[the taxable territories];
- (b) the fund shall have for its sole purpose the provision of annuities for employees in the trade or undertaking on their retirement at or after a specified age on their becoming incapacitated prior to such retirement, or for the widows, children or dependants of persons who are or have been such employees on the death of those persons; and
- (c) the employer in the trade or undertaking shall be a contributor to the fund:

Provided that the Central Board of Revenue may, if it thinks fit and subject to such conditions, if any, as it thinks proper to attach to the approval, approve a fund or any part of a fund—

- (i) notwithstanding that the rules of the fund provide for the return in certain contingencies of contributions paid to the fund, or
- (ii) if the main purpose of the fund is the provision of such annuities as aforesaid, notwithstanding that such provision is not its sole purpose, or
- (iii) notwithstanding that the trade or undertaking in connection with which the fund is established is carried on only partly in ²[the taxable territories].

58Q. Application for approval.—(1) An application for approval of a superannuation fund or part of a superannuation fund for any year of assessment shall be made in writing before the end of that year by the trustees of the fund to the Income-tax Officer, and shall be accompanied by a copy of the instrument under which the fund is established and by two copies of the rules and of the accounts of the fund for the last year for which such accounts have been made up. the fund shall forthwith communicate such alteration to the Income-tax Officer, and in default of such communication any approval given shall unless the Central Board of Revenue otherwise orders, be deemed to have been withdrawn from the date on which the alteration took effect.

58R. Exemption of superannuation fund from income-tax.—Income derived from investments or deposits of an approved superannuation fund ³[and any capital gains arising from the sale, exchange or transfer of capital assets of such fund] shall be exempt from payment of income-tax, and any sum paid by an employer or an employee by way of contribution towards an approved superannuation fund shall, in the case of an employer, be deducted in computing his income, profits or gains for the purpose of assessment, and, in the case of an employee, be treated for all the purposes of this Act as if it were a sum to which the provisions of section 15⁴ apply:

Provided that no such exemption shall be allowable to an employee in respect of any sum which is not an ordinary annual contribution:

Provided further that where a contribution by an employer is not an ordinary annual contribution it shall, for the purposes of this section, be treated, as the Central Board of Revenue may direct, either as an expense incurred in the year in which the sum is paid, or as an expense to be spread over such period of years as the Central Board of Revenue thinks proper.

58S. Treatment of repaid contributions.—(1) Where any contributions (including interest on contributions, if any) are repaid to an employee, the amount so repaid shall be deemed for the purposes of income-tax⁵ * * * to be income of the employee for that year.

(2) Where any contributions (including interest on contributions, if any) are repaid to an employee during his lifetime but not at or in connection with the termination of his employment, income-tax on the amount so repaid or paid shall except in the case of an employee whose employment was carried on abroad, be deducted by the trustees of the fund at the average rate of tax at which the employee was liable to income-tax * * * during the preceding three years or during such period, if less than three years, as he was a member of the fund, and shall be paid by the trustees to the credit of the Central Government within the prescribed time and in such manner as the Central Board of Revenue may direct.

58U. Liabilities of trustees on cessation of approval of fund.—If a fund or a part of a fund for any reason ceases to be an approved superannuation fund, the trustees of the fund shall nevertheless remain liable to account for tax on any sum paid—

(a) on account of returned contributions (including interest on contributions, if any), and

(b) in commutation or in lieu of annuities, in so far as the sum so paid is in respect of contributions made before the fund or part of the fund ceased to be an approved fund under the provisions of this Chapter.

(iv) particulars of sum paid in commutation or in lieu of annuities;

(c) furnish to the Income-tax Officer a copy of the accounts of the fund to the last date prior to such notice to which such accounts have been made up, together with such other information and particulars as the Central Board of Revenue may reasonably require.]

CREATION OF IRREVOCABLE TRUST FOR THE PURPOSES OF PAYING GRATUITY TO THE RETIRING EMPLOYEES¹

It has been brought to the notice of the Board that as a result of the award by Industrial Courts, textile mills are now compelled to pay their retiring employees gratuities at the following rates:—

(1) On the death of an employee while in service:—

One month's salary for each year of service subject to a maximum of 15 months' salary to be paid to the deceased employee's heirs or executors or nominees.

(2) On voluntary retirement or resignation of an employee:—

After 15 years' continuous service with the employer, 15 months salary.

(3) On termination of an employee's service:—

(a) after continuous service for 10 years but less than 15 years, $\frac{2}{3}$ th of one month's salary for each year of service.

(b) after 15 years continuous service, 15 months' salary.

It is also understood that the above award applies not only to future employees but also to the past, present and future services of employees who are already in service.

2. Certain employers are now contemplating the creation of Gratuity Funds so as to make provision for the gratuities referred to above. Under the present Income-tax law, no amount set apart by way of reserve for gratuity (or for any other purpose) can be allowed as a deduction in computing the profits for income-tax purposes, but the actual payment of gratuity can be allowed as and when paid, provided that the employer makes adequate arrangements for deduction and payment of tax from the gratuities.

3. Unlike the provisions in the Income-tax Act relating to recognition of Provident Funds or approval of Superannuation Funds there is no provision for approving any other type of funds, but section 10(4) of the Act provides that no allowance shall be made in respect of a payment to a provident or other fund established for the benefit of employees unless the employer has made effective arrangements to secure that tax shall be deducted at source from any payment made from the fund which are taxable under the head "Salaries". It would, therefore, appear that the said section contemplates that contributions by employers, to funds other than recognised provident funds or approved superannuation funds or provident funds to which the Provident Funds Act of 1925 applies, can be considered as an admissible deduction provided that the essential condition (but not necessarily the only condition) referred to in section 10(4) is satisfied.

The Board consider that if a Gratuity Fund is constituted into an irrevocable trust for the benefit of the employees, the contributions made to the fund, subject to the rules thereof being acceptable to the income-tax authorities, should be allowable as a deduction in the employer's income-tax assessments.

4. The rules to be framed for such a fund must, however, incorporate the following, among other, specific provisions namely that:—(1) the benefit of the Fund shall be open to only those persons who are wholetime bona fide employees of the employers, having no substantial shareholding interest; (2) the trust money shall be invested in such trustee securities as are payable both as regards capital and interest in India; (3) the gratuity shall be made payable and shall be paid only in India; (4) the trustees shall be responsible for deduction of tax from the gratuities and crediting the tax so deducted to the Government revenue; (5) no amendment of the rules of the fund shall be made without the approval of Central Board of Revenue; (6) the contributions shall be made on a reasonable basis acceptable to the Income-tax Department, i.e., either on actuarial basis or on any other basis having regard to the length of service of each employee concerned; (7) so much of the contributions as cannot properly be treated as ordinary annual contributions shall be treated by the Commissioner of Income-tax in the same manner as is adopted by the Central Board of Revenue to deal with similar contributions to an approved superannuation fund.

5. As stated above, there is no question of any formal approval of any Gratuity Fund as such under the law. All that the employers want, however, is that the rules of the Gratuity Funds being found satisfactory, the contributions made by the employers should be allowed as a deduction in computing their profits. The Board have given careful consideration to this request and have decided that if the rules of a Gratuity Fund, duly constituted under an irrevocable trust, satisfy the conditions laid down in paragraph 4 above, the contributions made by the employers may be allowed as a deduction in their income-tax assessment. The rules need not be forwarded to the Central Board of Revenue for "approval". The Commissioner concerned should, after going through the rules in each case, issue necessary instructions to the Income-tax Officer.

6. The manner of arriving at the tax relief in respect of the "initial contribution" will be as indicated in the illustration of the hypothetical case given below:—

1. The employees in respect of whom the extraordinary contribution is made are say, A. B. and C.
2. The earliest year when any of them was in the employer's service is say, 1938.
3. The extraordinary contribution in question is say, Rs. 9,000 made in 1943.
4. Aggregate salaries:—

PART VIII—PAYMENT OF DUTY (Section 51)

17. Calculation and adjustment of duty.—Duty shall, in the first instance, be calculated at the proper rate according to the principal value of the estate as set forth in the account delivered under section 53 or clause (a) of section 57 or prepared under sub-section (2) of section 61 of the Act but if, afterwards it is found that for any reason too little duty has been paid, the additional duty shall be payable and be treated as duty in arrear subject to the conditions specified in sub-section (2) of section 62 of the Act.

- (i) the name and description of the Fund;
- (ii) the name and address of the deceased member participating in the Fund;
- (iii) (a) in the case of a Provident Fund, the amount lying to the credit of the deceased on the date of his death; (b) in the case of a Superannuation Fund, any annuity, pension or lump sum payable under the Rules of the Fund with the detailed schemes thereof;
- (iv) the names and addresses of the Trustees, Administrators or other legal representatives of the deceased, if known;

² The heading and rule 37 were inserted by the Central Board of Revenue (Estate Duty) Notification No. S.R.O. 289 dated the 1st February, 1956, vide Gazette of India, 1956, Part II—Sec. 3, p. 155.

³[Explanatory Note.—This Note is not part of the rules or amendments but is intended to indicate their general purport.]

The particulars furnished under the new rule 37 will enable the Controller to make necessary enquiries to find out whether the estate of the deceased is liable to estate duty.

Trustees of Provident Funds and Superannuation Funds are also persons accountable under Section 53(1)(b) of the Estate Duty Act for estate duty in respect of the sums standing to the credit of the deceased member participating in the Fund. Before paying the amount to the legal heirs of the deceased, the Trustees would, therefore, insist in appropriate cases, on the production of a certificate from the Controller to the effect that the duty has been paid or will be paid or that none is due as the case may be. The particulars furnished under this rule would also ensure prompt action on the part of the Controller to settle the estate duty liability of the deceased.]

LIABILITY OF TRUSTEES OF PROVIDENT FUNDS UNDER SECTION 53 (1) (b) OF THE ESTATE DUTY ACT, 1953¹

Under Section 53(1)(b) of the Estate Duty Act, 1953, the Trustees of a Provident or Superannuation Fund fall within the category of accountable persons and are therefore liable for estate duty on the property passing on the death of a subscriber to the Fund to the extent of the amount standing to the credit of the deceased subscriber.

As a safeguard against any possible liability for estate duty under the above provision it was considered that the best course for the trustees of such funds was to obtain from the nominee or other legal heir of the deceased subscriber a certificate to the effect that no estate duty is payable or that the duty has been or will be paid in respect of the property so passing. But representations have been made to the Central Board of Revenue from time to time by various organisations urging that the enforcement of this procedure in all cases regardless of the amount payable, would cause unnecessary hardship to nominees and heirs of deceased subscribers whose total estate was not likely to attract estate duty, and that the trustees should in such cases be exonerated from any liability if they made payment without calling for the estate duty certificate, provided the amount standing to the credit of the deceased subscriber did not exceed a certain limit or alternatively duty at the maximum rate be deducted at source before making any such payment.

Since the liability of the trustees is fixed by statute, the Board do not consider it feasible to lay down any particular limit for such payments below which the trustees would not be held liable as accountable persons. The trustees of the fund are well-situated to know the probable extent and value of the estate of a deceased subscriber and if they feel that deceased's estate would not be liable to estate duty, there is no bar to their making payment out of the fund. In any case, it is for them to exercise discretion as to whether a discharge certificate should be insisted upon in any particular case before payment is made to the deceased's heirs or nominees. In the case of a deceased wage earner however, where the total amount standing to his credit is less than Rs. 5,000/—, the only assurance the Government can give is that if the trustees make payment without awaiting an exemption certificate and if duty is found to be ultimately payable in such a case, the Department would in the first instance attempt to collect the duty from the other property left behind by the deceased subscriber. This, by the way is merely a procedural clarification; the statutory liability of the trustees remain undisturbed.

There is no provision either in the Estate Duty Act or in the Estate Duty Rules which authorises the deduction of duty at source from payments made out of a fund. It is therefore for the trustees to consider whether before making payments in any particular case they should keep back some amount for any future liability for estate duty which they might be called upon to discharge as accountable persons.

INDUSTRIAL STATISTICS LEGISLATION

Collection of Industrial Statistics

The Royal Commission on Labour in India strongly recommended the necessity of enacting legislation for collection of industrial statistics in India. The quality and nature of reliable information in regard to the progress of industries and of labour conditions were inadequate. The matter was considered at the eleventh session of the Industries Conference in 1939 and also at the Second Conference of Labour Minister in 1940 and the collection of statistics relating to industries and labour was thought necessary and desirable.

The Central Government took the initiative of enacting the Industrial Statistics Act in 1942 (XIX of 1942) though the Government of Madhya Pradesh took the lead in passing similar legislation in 1939.

Industrial Statistics Act, 1942 (XIX of 1942)

The Act extends to the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir. It is designed to enable State Governments to collect informations and to frame rules for the purpose. It provides for the collection of statistics relating to factories and conditions of life and work of the workers, commodity prices, regularity of attendance, living conditions, rent of dwelling houses, workers' indebtedness, wages and hours of work, particulars of provident funds, benefits and amenities provided for labour, returns of employment and unemployment and industrial disputes. It aims at giving greater degree of uniformity in the collection of statistics than had hitherto been possible. The Act empowers the State Governments to make rules and the Central Government to give direction to the State Governments for securing uniformity in the procedure and in the method to be adopted in collecting informations.

The State Governments have appointed Statistics Authorities and the Central Government has appointed a Director of Industrial Statistics to co-ordinate the work in connection with the implementation of collection of statistics relating to factories.

Statutory Collection of Statistics

The Standing Labour Committee in the fifth meeting held in June, 1944 proposed that in view of the unsatisfactory procedure for collection of statistics relating to trade disputes, the machinery provided under the Industrial Statistics Act of 1942 should be utilised with a view to improve the existing statistics and in order to have uniformity in the method of compilation. The Central Government drafted rules and forms and circulated them to the State Governments and employers' and workers' organisations.

The Central Government decided to utilise the Act for collection of statistics relating to labour problems and necessary forms were drafted and the matter was discussed in the ninth session of the Indian Labour Conference held in April, 1948.

Census of Manufacturing Industries Rules

Under the directions of the Central Government, the Census of Manufacturing Industries Rules were framed by the different State Governments, providing for collection of annual statistics relating inter alia to capital structure, production costs and out-turn in respect of 29 industries. In addition to these industries, 34 industries have been covered on a sample basis for the years 1949 to 1951 and this sample enquiry is being conducted by the National Sample Survey Organisation of the Central Government.

Industrial Statistics (Labour) Rules

The Central Government framed the Model Industrial Statistics (Labour) Rules for quarterly collection of statistics on employment, attendance, absenteeism, involuntary unemployment, hours of work and earnings of workers in respect of factories covered under the Factories Act, 1948, plantation, tramways and ports. The Model Rules were sent to the State Governments with statutory directions for adoption. All the States have not yet finalised the rules, but some of the States like West Bengal after publishing the final rules in the Official Gazettes, have started collection of returns.

Industrial Statistics (Industrial and Labour Disputes) Rules

The Central Government have also framed draft rules called the Industrial Statistics (Industrial and Labour Disputes) Rules for collecting statistics of industrial disputes. The draft rules were published by some of the State Governments. Only a very few State Governments like West Bengal have finalised the rules.

Collection of Statistics Act, 1953 (XXXII of 1953)

The Central Government had very limited legal power to collect statistical data on various subjects particularly in the industrial and commercial field. Voluntary co-operation of the interests concerned have not been satisfactory in all cases. To put the matter on a regular basis, the Minister of Commerce and Industries introduced the Collection of Statistics Bill in the Parliament on the 12th December, 1952 to facilitate the collection of statistics of certain kinds relating to industries, trade and commerce.

The Act repeals and re-enacts the Industrial Statistics Act, 1942 with alterations and enlarged scope. The Act received the assent of the President on the 18th September, 1953; but it has not yet been brought into force by the Central Government.

The Act provides for collection of statistics in respect of matters relating to any industry or class of industries or any commercial or industrial concern or class of commercial or industrial concerns, particularly any matter relating to factories and also for calling for certain matters relating to welfare of labour and conditions of labour, viz, (1) price of commodities; (2) attendance; (3) living conditions including housing, water supply and sanitation; (4) indebtedness; (5) rents of dwelling houses, (6) wages and other earnings; (7) provident fund and other funds provided for labour; (8) benefits and amenities provided for labour; (9) hours of work; (10) employment and unemployment; (11) industrial and labour disputes; (12) labour turnover and (13) trade unions.

The Act authorises the Central Government to start collection of statistics in the States on its own and to appoint Statistics Authority for this purpose, apart from giving directions to the State Governments to carry into execution the provisions of the Act in the States. The Act provides for punishment for offences committed by companies to the extent of Rs. 500/- which is same as in the case of an individual.

Collection of Statistics (Labour) Rules under Collection of Statistics Act

The question of implementation of the Industrial Statistics (Labour) Rules was discussed in the thirteenth session of the Indian Labour Conference held in January, 1954. The Central Labour Minister stressed the need and urgency of collection of statistics for formulation of the labour policy.

In September, 1955, the Central Government forwarded to the State Governments and employers' and workers' organisations, Draft Model Collection of Statistics (Labour) Rules framed in the light of the provisions of the Collection of Statistics Act, 1953 which would replace the Industrial Statistics (Labour) Rules framed in 1951 under the Industrial Statistics Act, 1942. The draft does not reveal any material changes from the Industrial Statistics (Labour) Rules. It prescribes the period within which the Statistics Authority shall serve a notice on the owner of a factory requiring him to furnish the quarterly returns relating to employment, hours of work and earnings and the period within which such informations have to be furnished by him.

Draft Collection of Statistics Rules, 1956¹

The Central Government in the Ministry of Commerce and Industry have re-published the draft of the Collection of Statistics Rules, 1953 with forms under a notification No. 1774 dated the 4th August, 1956, for eliciting public opinion. The previous Draft Rules of 1953 were published under a notification dated the 19th October, 1953 without any form and have not so long been finalised. The new draft rules will come into force immediately on the commencement of the Act.

INDUSTRIAL STATISTICS ACT, 1942 (XIX OF 1942)

Statement of Objects and Reasons²

It has been felt for some time, by both the Central and Provincial Governments, that the quantity and nature of reliable information in regard to the progress of industries and of labour conditions available to them has been inadequate and that steps should be taken to effect an improvement in the matter. It was realised that the most important step necessary was to provide for fuller compilation of industrial statistics. The limit of what could be achieved in this respect by relying merely on goodwill and the voluntary supply of information had been reached and legislation was therefore considered to be necessary. The matter was placed before the eleventh Industries Conference in December 1939 and the Conference of Labour Ministers held in January 1940. Both these bodies were of opinion that the collection of statistics relating to industries and labour was most desirable and recommended that the Central Government should undertake legislation on the subject. The scope of compilation, as in clause 3, has found unanimous acceptance by all the Provincial Governments and the Bill is designed to enable the Provincial Governments to collect information and to frame rules for the purpose. It is proposed that with a view to securing uniformity in the procedure and the method to be adopted in collecting information, directions may be issued by the Central Government under Section 126 (2) of the Government of India Act, 1935, where necessary.

COLLECTION OF STATISTICS ACT, 1953 (XXXII OF 1953)

Statement of Objects and Reasons¹

It has been felt that at present Government have very limited legal powers to collect statistics for the various subjects which are the concern of the Centre, particularly in the industrial and commercial field. It is also considered that the existing arrangements for getting trade statistics through the customs authorities and statistical data in respect of specific commodities under the relevant Acts, are also not very comprehensive. Accordingly, Government have largely to depend on the voluntary co-operation of the interests concerned in regard to the collection of statistical data from industrial concerns and business houses.

2. Recently, in order to assess the extent to which foreign owned and controlled firms engaged Indians and foreign nationals, a notification calling upon all undertakings to furnish the statistics was issued in all important English daily newspapers all over India. The response to the notification has not however been very satisfactory. Though Government can exert pressure to make certain firms submit returns, it is expedient that Government should be armed with powers to compel all concerns (including managing agency firms) engaged in (a) trade and commerce with foreign countries, (b) inter-State trade and commerce, (c) trading firms or corporations, incorporated, registered or otherwise permitted in India, including banking, insurance and other financial corporations, and (d) stock exchanges, to furnish such information.

3. The Bill, while replacing the Industrial Statistics Act, 1942 (XIX of 1942), is designed to incorporate all the existing provisions and to provide in addition for the collection of information and statistics in respect of matters related to items 41, 42, 43 and 48 in List I in the Seventh Schedule to the Constitution.

INDUSTRIAL HOUSING LEGISLATION

Housing of Industrial Labour

The provision for cheap, sanitary and adequate housing accommodation for industrial labour has been recognised as the most important problem which has a vital bearing on the welfare of the working class. Improved housing accommodation will undoubtedly improve the industrial efficiency, health and well-being of the industrial population in India. This problem has so long been neglected in India, neither the Government nor the local authorities, nor the employers have paid much attention to the problem of housing. Some of the employers, of course, have provided some sort of housing facilities to their workers; but in most cases the workers are left to find accommodation for themselves. The result is the growth of congested, over-crowded and insanitary slums around the industrial centres in India, which lack sufficient ventilation and lighting and which are unfit for human habitation and the workers are obliged to live in these slums. The chawls of Bombay, the ahatas of Cawnpore, the cheries of Madras and the bustees of Calcutta will bear eloquent testimony to the deplorable conditions in which the workers are compelled to live and these slums "out-slum many slums of the world".

Indian Industrial Commission, 1919

The Indian Industrial Commission urged in 1919 the importance of improving the health and housing conditions of the industrial workers and recommended that the Local Governments should compulsorily acquire land on behalf of employers for housing their workers.

Royal Commission on Labour in India, 1931

This deplorable nature of housing conditions of the workers, both in urban and industrial areas in India, was discussed by the Royal Commission on Labour in India in 1931. The Commission realised the importance of providing industrial housing in India and made several important recommendations regarding provision of better types of houses with adequate space, light, ventilation, drainage, latrines and sanitary arrangements. The Commission also specified different roles for the Central and Provincial Governments, municipalities and local boards, co-operative societies, employers' and workers' organisations.

The Commission recommended "that the Land Acquisition Act be so amended as to provide that the housing of labour shall be deemed to be a work likely to prove useful to the public and that the definition of "company" be so modified as to include industrial concerns owned by individuals or associations of individuals".

With a view to give effect to the Royal Commission's recommendations, the Central Government introduced a Bill in the Legislative Assembly on the 12th

¹ Statement of Objects and Reasons of Land Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1933—"The Land Acquisition Act, 1894 makes it possible where the previous consent of the Local Government has been obtained, to acquire land compulsorily on behalf of companies, provided that the land is needed for a work 'likely to prove useful to the public.' The Royal Commission on Labour have recommended that the Act be so amended as to enable land to be thus acquired when it is needed for the housing of labour, either by companies or by other employers. They stated that, in a number of instances brought to their notice, land eminently suitable for the development of housing schemes had been held at ransom by the owners, fantastic values being placed upon it as a result of the construction of factories and other industrial concerns in the neighbourhood. The provision of adequate housing for workmen is one of the urgent needs of Indian industry, and the Bill seeks to give effect to the Commission's recommendations." (Gazette of India, 1932, Part V, page 191.)

September, 1932 to amend the Land Acquisition Act of 1894. The Bill after being circulated for public opinion, was referred to the Select Committee and was subsequently passed as Land Acquisition (Amendment) Act, 1933 (XVI of 1933). The Amending Act enables a company to acquire land compulsorily for the purpose of constructing dwelling houses for its workers or for providing amenities directly connected therewith.

Under the Amending Act, an industrial concern, ordinarily employing not less than 100 workmen and owned by an individual or an association of individuals, is deemed to be a company for the purpose of acquisition of land for such purpose. The State Governments are empowered to prescribe the terms on which the land shall be held by the company and the time within which, the conditions on which and the manner in which the dwelling houses or amenities shall be erected or provided.

Recommendations of Central and State Labour Enquiry Committees

Bombay Textile Labour Enquiry Committee, Cawnpore Labour Enquiry Committee, Bihar Labour Enquiry Committee and U. P. Labour Enquiry Committee in their reports pointed out the deplorable housing conditions in most of the industrial centres and made various recommendations for improving the housing conditions of labourers.

The Labour Investigation Committee (Rege Committee) suggested that the States should take the responsibility of providing finance for housing and the recurring expenses should be borne by the different parties concerned. The Committee recommended setting up of statutory Central and Provincial Boards on a tripartite basis to deal with industrial housing policy and all questions concerning finance, ownership, standard of accommodation and actual construction.

The Health Survey and Development Committee (Bhore Committee) in the report published in 1946 commented on the appalling conditions of overcrowding in industrial centres and suggested the essentiality of a long term housing policy for satisfactory solution of housing problems. The Committee expressed the view that the housing of industrial population was primarily the responsibility of the Governments concerned and recommended establishment of statutory bodies to execute house construction programme and enforcement of minimum standards. The Committee suggested that the Government should accept the responsibility for housing of lower income groups and recommended setting up of an All-India Housing Research Institute for co-ordinating building research activities.

Industrial Housing Sub-Committee

The problem of industrial housing was discussed in the seventh meeting of the Standing Labour Committee held in August, 1945 and an Industrial Housing Sub-Committee was appointed with the representatives of Central and State Governments.

The Sub-Committee in its report on the 25th May, 1946, recommended amongst others that (1) There should be a building fund for financing the housing of workers to be raised by the Central and State Governments by making available long-term interest-free loans for housing built according to approved standards. (2) The housing scheme should be subsidised by the Central and State Governments and employers. The building fund and the subsidy should be administered by a National Industrial Housing Board consisting of the representatives of the Central and State Governments, employers, workers and other interested parties. (3) The Central and State Governments should provide for necessary finance by raising long-term interest-free loans. (4) The Central and the State Governments should co-ordinate their building programmes through the National Industrial Housing Board for ensuring cheap and efficient construction of houses.

The Report of the Industrial Housing Sub-Committee was discussed in the ninth meeting of the Standing Labour Committee held at New Delhi in July, 1946 and the standards of housing were generally approved.

Five Year Labour Programme and Central Government's Housing Scheme

The Five-Year-Labour Programme of the Central Government provides for adequate housing for the workers. The first Housing Scheme formulated in 1946 by the Central Government allowed a subsidy to the State Government of $12\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. but up to the maximum of Rs. 200/- per house, provided the State Government also contributed a similar amount. The Scheme was not successful.

Industrial Policy Resolution dated 30th April, 1948

In the Industrial Policy Resolution of April, 1948, the Central Government, with a view to improving the industrial housing, announced their decision to construct one million workers' houses in ten years and constitute a Housing Board for the purpose, the cost being shared in suitable proportions between the Government, employers and the labour. The Central Government proposed to advance loans to serve as capital for the construction of houses and that the recurring charges should be shared by the workers, employers, Central Government and State Governments. The proposal was discussed in the Labour Ministers' Conference held in May, 1948 which recommended that the capital required for industrial housing should be raised by loan and the recurring charges should be met partly by levy of a capitation tax on the employers.

Central Government's New Industrial Housing Scheme, 1949

A new Scheme of Industrial Housing was formulated by the Ministry of Labour, Government of India in April, 1949, suggesting constitution of Central and Regional Housing Boards for the execution of the Scheme. Under the Scheme, the capital required for industrial housing will be provided to the extent of two-thirds by the Central Government and one-third by the State Government or the employer sponsored by the State Government. The Central Government will not grant any subvention to the State Governments for this purpose.

The conditions were that the Central Government should approve the standard of housing to be maintained and the area chosen for construction and that the rent to be charged from the employee should not exceed $2\frac{1}{2}\%$ of the capital cost. The Scheme was also not successful as the response from the State Governments was not satisfactory.

Subsidised Industrial Housing Scheme of the Central Government, 1952-56

Early in 1952, a Subsidised Industrial Housing Scheme was formulated by the Ministry of Labour, Government of India, under which the Central Government would pay a subsidy of 20% of the cost of building including the cost of land, provided the balance was paid by the employers who would let out the houses to their workers.

As the response from the employers to this Scheme was not encouraging, the Ministry of Works, Housing and Supply, Government of India, prepared a new Subsidised Industrial Housing Scheme for providing houses to the industrial workers through the agency of State Governments, Housing Boards and Co-operative Societies by means of subsidies and loans on easy terms. The Central Government convened an All-India Tripartite Conference on Housing in August, 1952 which approved this Scheme.

Under this Scheme, financial assistance would be given in the form of subsidies and loans by the Central Government to the State Governments, statutory Housing Boards, employers and registered co-operative house-building societies of industrial workers.

The Scheme provides for Central subsidies up to 50% of the total cost of construction including cost of land and loans for the balance when housing schemes have been undertaken by the State Governments, the loans being repayable in 25 years with interest @ 4½% per annum, 50% subsidy would be given to the Housing Boards. In the case of houses built for industrial workers by employers or co-operative societies, the subsidy will be 25% of the cost and a loan of 37½% of the total cost repayable in 15 years with interest @ 4½ or 4½%. Loans and subsidies to the employers will be given directly by the Central Government but the loans to Housing Board, Co-operative Societies and local bodies will be made through the State Governments which will guarantee them. This Scheme was approved by the Planning Commission and was incorporated in the First Five Year Plan.

The Scheme provides that only the industrial workers will be entitled to assistance and further provides payment of sanctioned financial assistance in instalments related roughly to the progress of construction. The specifications, lay-outs, standards of accommodation and densities in the nature of minima have been provided in the scheme.

Application for financial assistance under the Scheme has to be made to the Ministry of Works, Housing and Supply and an agreement has to be entered into with the Central Government. The ownership of the tenements constructed by the employers or workers' co-operative societies will vest in them subject to the terms and conditions of the agreement.

The Scheme will remain in force till the year 1955-56. Under the Scheme, the Central Government will bear the major share of the financial burden of the housing programme.

Planning Commission on Industrial Housing

The Planning Commission in the First Five Year Plan made an attempt to assess the housing shortage in the chief industrial towns.

The Commission suggested that in view of the gravity and vastness of the problem, the Central Government should accept large measure of responsibility for financing housing programmes in industrial centres. The Commission recommended that a subsidy up to 50% of the total cost of construction, including cost of land, should be paid to the State Government and statutory Housing Boards, 25% to private employers and co-operative housing societies of industrial workers. Loans for the balance, repayable in 25 years, should be made available to the State Government. Private employers and co-operative housing societies of industrial workers might obtain loan up to 37½% of the total cost, repayable in 15 years, from the Central Government directly.

The Commission emphasised on the need of research in building techniques and materials and also suggested the setting up of a National Building Organisation for properly co-ordinating and publishing the research works for cheapening cost and improving building techniques.

The Commission further recommended the establishment of statutory autonomous Central and Regional Housing Boards to implement the housing programme.

The Commission recommended enactment of a Housing Act and a Town and Country Planning Act and amendment of the Land Acquisition Act of 1894 regarding payment of compensation for lands required to implement housing schemes for industrial workers and for providing for a speedier method of taking possession of the acquired lands.

The Second five Year Plan did not suggest any alteration in the Subsidised Industrial Scheme approved in the First Five Year Plan. The Scheme now applies also to mine workers other than those engaged in coal and mica industries for whom there are separate schemes.

State Legislations on Industrial Housing

Bombay Housing Board Act, 1948

Among the States, the Government of Bombay took the lead in enacting housing legislation and the Bombay Housing Board Act was passed on the 22nd December, 1948. The Act was amended in 1949 and 1951.

The Act provides for constituting a Housing Board consisting of a Chairman and four members nominated by the State Government. Subject to the control of the State Government, the Board is authorised to incur expenditure and undertake works for framing housing scheme and executing the same. The Board is authorised to acquire land in connection with its programme of housing schemes as a local authority for the purpose of the Land Acquisition Act. The Board is empowered to promote land and building development and to levy betterment charges.

Mysore Labour Housing Act, 1949

The Government of Mysore enacted the Mysore Labour Housing Act in February 1949 in order to make provision for providing proper housing accommodation for the workers. The Act provides for the constitution of a Labour Housing Fund for meeting the expenses of housing schemes and further provides that the Fund is to be raised from levy of a capitation tax on employers, rents from employee-tenants and donations, grants or gifts from the State Government, local authorities or individuals. The Act also provides for collection of contributions from certain categories of employers.

The Act provides for the constitution of a Housing Corporation consisting of the representatives of the State Government, employers and employees for the purpose of administration of the Fund. The Housing Corporation is authorised to carry out housing schemes for providing suitable accommodation for the employees and to acquire land for this purpose.

Madhya Pradesh Housing Board Act, 1950

The Government of Madhya Pradesh enacted the Madhya Pradesh Housing Board Act on the 10th November, 1950. The Act provides for constitution of a Housing Board consisting of the Chairman and nine members. The Board is empowered to frame and carry out housing schemes and to do such other things which may expedite and cheapen building constructions. The Board is also authorised to acquire land as a local authority for the purposes of Land Acquisition Act. The Fund of the Board will be raised from grants, donations, gifts or loan.

The State Government framed the Madhya Pradesh Housing Board Rules in May, 1952, prescribing the duties and functions of the Chairman and officers of the Board, conditions under which the Board can borrow money and forms in which the annual housing programme, budget, etc. have to be submitted.

Hyderabad Labour Housing Act, 1952

The Hyderabad Labour Housing Act which came into force on the 15th November, 1952 provides for setting up of a Housing Corporation with the Labour Minister as Chairman and three representatives each of the employers and employees and six nominees of the State Government including one woman. The Corporation is required to provide houses of approved types and designs for the workers as near as possible to their places of work.

The Act provides for constitution of a Labour Housing Fund with grants, donations, loans from the Central or State Government, local authority and private bodies. The Act specifies the purposes for which the Fund may be utilised and authorises the Corporation to sanction grant-in-aid to the employer or local authority for the purpose of any approved scheme.

The construction will be through the agency of: (i) State Governments or Statutory Housing Boards; (ii) Employers; and (iii) Registered Co-operative Societies of Industrial Workers.

2. Minimum Standards of Accommodation.—(i) The minimum accommodation that has to be provided in a tenement under the Scheme must consist of:

A: One-roomed tenement

1. Room	120 square feet
2. Verandah and kitchen	72 " "
3. A bath-room	16 " "
4. A lavatory	12 " "

B: Two-roomed tenement

	Single-storeyed	Multi-storeyed
1. Room No. 1	120 square feet	100 square feet
2. Room No. 2	96 " "	99 " "
3. Kitchen and verandah	100.5 " "	98 " "
4. Bath-Room	16 " "	16 " "
5. Lavatory [see note (b) below]	12 " "	6 (half) " "
6. Cup-board	11 " "	12 sq. " "

Note: (a) For one-roomed tenements: A water-fluid lavatory may be shared between two tenements. If, however, a service privy is provided, each tenement should have one separately. Where multi-storeyed construction is undertaken, provision of common sanitary facilities at a scale of 3 lavatories, 2 bath-rooms, 2 washing places and 1 stair-case for each set of eight tenements will be considered satisfactory, though attempts should be made to provide independent lavatories and bath-rooms.

(b) For two-roomed tenements: Individual lavatories and bath-rooms should be provided in each two-roomed tenement. In the case of multi-storeyed construction, however, there will be no objection to a lavatory being shared between two tenements.

(c) It will be desirable to keep the width of the verandah at least 8'.

3. Standard costs.—For the purpose of the Scheme the standard costs of different types of tenements will be as follows:

Type of tenement	Cost of building	Cost of land	Standard cost
A. Single-storeyed and double-storeyed tenements in or outside Bombay and Calcutta.
1. Single-storeyed one-roomed	2,260	440	2,700
2. Single-storeyed two-roomed	2,900	440	3,340
3. Double-storeyed one-roomed	2,260	440	2,700
4. Double-storeyed two-roomed	3,050	440	3,490
B. Multi-storeyed tenement in Bombay and Calcutta.
1. Multi-storeyed one-roomed	3,200	800	4,000
2. Multi-storeyed two-roomed	4,630	800	5,430

Note: (1) Financial assistance will be based on either the standard cost given above or the actual cost, whichever is lower.

(2) Where multi-storeyed tenements are proposed to be constructed at places other than Bombay and Calcutta, assistance will be restricted to that admissible on the basis of standard costs for double-storeyed tenements given above.

(3) For single-storeyed and double-storeyed tenements proposed to be constructed in Bombay and Calcutta, assistance will be restricted to that admissible for similar tenements elsewhere.

(4) The cost of land and/or its development will be taken into consideration for purposes of financial assistance unless the land required has already been acquired and/or developed.

(5) The standard costs of Rs. 4,000 and 5,430 for multi-storeyed one-roomed and two-roomed tenements in Bombay and Calcutta may be raised to Rs. 4,500 or Rs. 5,930 respectively, in special cases.

4. Financial assistance.—The financial assistance provided by the Government of India will consist of subsidies and loans on comparatively easy terms. The maximum permissible subsidies and loans in the case of each agency are given in Tables I and II.

NOTE.—1. The figures for land includes the cost of development.

2. Where multi-storeyed tenements are proposed to be constructed at places other than Bombay and Calcutta, assistance will be restricted to that admissible for double-storeyed tenements as indicated in Table 1.

3. Each loan figure and each subsidy figure represent the maximum; the loan sanctioned in each case will be either this figure or 50 per cent. of the admitted cost in the case of State Govts., Statutory Housing Boards and Co-operative Societies of Industrial Workers and $37\frac{1}{2}$ per cent. of the admitted cost in the case of employers, whichever is less.

The subsidy will be either the figure indicated or 50 per cent. of the admitted cost in the case of State Govts. and Statutory Housing Board and 25 per cent. in the case of Co-operative Societies of Industrial Workers and employers, whichever is less. If the actual cost proves to be lower than the admitted cost, the subsidy will be disbursed at the appropriate percentage of actual cost.

For the year 1955-56, the rate of interest will be $4\frac{1}{4}$ per cent. for State Governments and Statutory Housing Boards; for employers it will be $4\frac{3}{4}$ per cent.; the loans advanced to State Governments for Workers' Co-operatives, will, so far as the Central Government is concerned, be at $4\frac{1}{4}$ per cent. Loans will be recoverable in 25 annual equated instalments from State Governments and Co-operative Societies of Industrial Workers and in 15 such instalments from industrialists. The detailed provisions in this respect will be found in Clause 9 of the Agreements at Appendices B and D.

5. Assistance to Co-operative Societies of Industrial Workers.—(i) Assistance for Co-operative Societies of Industrial Workers will be provided through the State Governments.

(ii) To be eligible for assistance a Co-operative Society of Industrial Workers must provide in its bye-laws that it is permitted "to accept from the Government moneys by way of loan and subsidy, under the Subsidised Industrial Housing Scheme of the Government of India, subject to such terms and conditions (notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the bye-laws) as they may impose in this regard and to utilise such moneys for the construction of tenements for such of its worker-members as are bona fide employees of.....and governed by the Factories Act, 1948, or Mines Act, 1952 and to enter into such agreements with the said worker-members as may be necessary to implement the said terms and conditions agreed to with the Government as a condition precedent to the grant of the said loan and subsidy".

The State Government concerned will have to enter into suitable agreements with each Co-operative Society of Industrial Workers, for whom assistance under the Scheme is approved. In addition, each agreement with a Co-operative Society of Industrial Workers must provide that, for 25 years (the period of the agreement) from the date of completion of each tenement, the ownership of the tenement will not pass to any person who is not an industrial worker.

Whenever possible, the subsidy to a Co-operative Society of Industrial Workers should take the form of the grant of developed building sites: the cost should not, however, exceed the maximum already indicated.

6. Limits of assistance.—(i) No financial assistance under the Scheme will be granted for the housing of employees of the Central or the State Governments, of local authorities, or of any statutory bodies (other than those paying income-tax in respect of their earnings or a part thereof) even if the workers are governed by the Factories Act, 1948, or by the Mines Act, 1952. Workers in corporations or companies owned in part or in full by Central or State Governments will, however, be entitled to assistance under the Scheme.

(ii) While sanctioning assistance under the Scheme, the Government of India will take into consideration such facts as the industrial population of the State, housing conditions in the area concerned, etc., which generally determine the urgency of the provision of housing in each State.

7. Standard Rents.—The standard rents for the types of tenements indicated in paragraph 3 are as follows:—

Type of tenement	Standard rent per month
A. In Bombay and Calcutta.	Rs.
1. Single-storeyed one-roomed	10 0 0
2. Single-storeyed two-roomed	13 0 0
3. Double-storeyed one-roomed	10 0 0
4. Double-storeyed two-roomed	14 0 0
5. Multi-storeyed one-roomed	17 8 0
6. Multi-storeyed two-roomed	23 8 0
B. Outside Bombay and Calcutta.
7. Single-storeyed one-roomed	10 0 0
8. Single-storeyed two-roomed	13 0 0
9. Double-storeyed one-roomed	10 0 0
10. Double-storeyed two-roomed	14 0 0
11. Multi-storeyed one-roomed	10 0 0
12. Multi-storeyed two-roomed	14 0 0

Note: (i) There is no objection to the charging of lower rents

(2) These rents are inclusive of municipal rates and taxes. In case the State Governments succeed in lowering these rates and taxes, the benefit of any such reduction should be passed on to the tenant in the form of lower rents.

8. Payment of Loan and Subsidy.—The payment of sanctioned financial assistance will be made in instalments related roughly to the progress of construction.

(a) For State Governments or Statutory Housing Boards:—

Loan

(i) 33½ per cent. on acceptance of the terms and conditions indicated in the sanction letter;

(ii) 33½ per cent. when construction reaches plinth level;

(iii) 33½ per cent. when construction reaches roof level.

Subsidy

(i) 80 per cent. on completion of the project;

(ii) 20 per cent. when audited figures of the cost of complete construction are received and admitted.

Loan

(i) 25 per cent. when construction reaches plinth level;

(ii) 50 per cent. when construction reaches roof level;

(iii) 25 per cent. on completion of the project.

Subsidy

- (i) 20 per cent. on completion of the project; and
- (ii) 80 per cent. on receipt and acceptance of audited accounts.

(c) For Co-operative Societies of Industrial Workers:—

Loan

- (i) 33½ per cent. when construction reaches plinth level;
- (ii) 66½ per cent. when construction reaches roof level.

Subsidy

- (i) 66½ per cent. on completion of the project;
- (ii) 33½ per cent. on receipt and acceptance of audited accounts.

Note 1.—The method of payment indicated herein relates to single-storeyed construction; where construction is double or multi-storeyed, the method of payment will be suitably altered.

Note 2.—On a suggestion received from the Bombay Government in respect of payment of loan assistance to the Co-operative Societies, it has been agreed that the Co-operative Societies in that State will be paid one-third of the loan assistance on acceptance of terms and conditions of the sanction letter, another one-third on construction reaching plinth-level and the remaining one-third on completion of roof level.

9. Specifications, etc.—(i) Specifications chosen should be such that the estimated life of the tenements will be about 40 years. As specifications will have to depend on climatic conditions, and building materials locally available, no standard specifications are being laid down. Alternative specifications for each structural component are given in Appendix A.

(ii) The choice of building designs is primarily a matter for the agency concerned to decide, subject to the proviso that the minimum standards of accommodation are assured.

(iii) The lay-outs of industrial housing projects should be very carefully prepared and reasonable provision for open spaces should be made. It is desirable that each tenement should ordinarily have a courtyard of between 300 and 400 sq. ft. with either a compound wall or a fence so that hedges can be grown. In double-storeyed tenements with flat terraces on top, a staircase to reach the terrace should be provided so that it may be used in the hot weather. In the dry hot regions, tenements should normally be not more than double-storeyed. In the humid hot regions, multi-storeyed construction may be undertaken with adequate cross-ventilation.

Each lay-out should also indicate the sites where trees, providing plenty of shade, are proposed to be planted. These should be at the rate of about one per tenement except in the case of multi-storeyed tenements.

(iv) Industrial housing projects under the Scheme should not have densities higher than those indicated below:—

- (a) Single-storeyed development—20-25 tenements per gross acre.
- (b) Double-storeyed development—30-35 tenements per gross acre.
- (c) Three-storeyed development—40-45 tenements per gross acre.
- (d) Four-storeyed development—50-60 tenement per gross acre.

Even if construction is higher than four-storeyed, the density should not exceed 60 tenements per gross acre.

The lower figures in each case should be aimed at for bigger neighbourhoods where community facilities like roads, parks, etc., have to be provided within the colony; the higher figures may be adopted for smaller colonies where perimeter roads and some community facilities exist outside the proposed colonies. In the bigger cities, if a colony of less than 100 tenements is proposed to be constructed, a higher density may be permitted if it appears that the residents of the colony have access to community facilities provided by local bodies. It will be appreciated, therefore, that a good site-plan showing the proposed colony and its surrounding as clearly as possible is very essential for the expeditious consideration by Government of any proposed project.

(v) The specifications, lay-outs, standards of accommodation and densities indicated herein are in the nature of minima and there is no objection to the adoption of better standards. The financial assistance that may be sanctioned in each case will not, however, exceed that based on the maximum standard costs indicated in paragraph 3, in any circumstances.

(vi) It has been found that the choice of the specifications and the preparation of lay-outs take a long time to settle by correspondence. It will be better, therefore, if intending applicants under the scheme discuss these problems with the Housing Adviser to this Ministry (Shri C. B. Patel, Office Telephone No. 43006), before specifications are finally chosen and lay-outs are finally settled. Where it is not possible, it is desirable that details relating to specifications, lay-outs, estimates of costs, etc., are prepared by qualified architects, engineers or town planners.

10. Management of tenements.—The management of each housing project under the Scheme undertaken by the industrialists must be entrusted to a committee consisting of the representatives of the employer on the one hand and of workers on the other, with a Chairman nominated by the State Government concerned. The allotment of tenements in each such project will be governed by the rules of allotment (Appendix F) which will be found as an enclosure to Appendix B.

11. Mode of Application.—(a) Applications for financial assistance under the Scheme should be accompanied by:—(i) The attached questionnaire (Appendix G) duly filled in; (ii) Site plan; (iii) Lay-out plan; (iv) Building plan; (v) Detailed specifications; (vi) Detailed estimates of the cost of building; (vii) Detailed estimates of the cost of development (if the land is not already developed); and (viii) Memorandum and Articles of Association in the case of employers; or Bye-laws in the case of Co-operative Societies. They should be addressed to the Secretary to the Government of India, Ministry of Works, Housing and Supply, New Delhi.

(b) Where an applicant is not a State Government, copies of all the documents indicated in paragraph (a) should also be endorsed to the State Government concerned so that they may send their comments on the proposal to the Government of India as soon as possible.

12. Ownership, etc.—(a) Every employer, for whom financial assistance is sanctioned under the Scheme, will have to enter into an agreement with the Government of India. The forms of agreement to be executed in cases where both loan and subsidy are sanctioned and where only subsidy is sanctioned are attached as Appendix B and Appendix C* respectively to this Scheme. The form of agreement to be executed by the Co-operatives with State Governments concerned will be somewhat on the lines of the model agreement given as Appendix D* to this Scheme. Every employer, who is sanctioned loan and subsidy under the Scheme will also have to execute a mortgage deed with the Government of India; the form of this deed will be found at Appendix E* to this Scheme.

(b) The ownership of the tenements constructed by the employers or workers' Co-operative Societies will vest in the employers or workers' Co-operative Societies concerned, subject to the terms and conditions of the agreement entered into in each case.

13. Allotment of tenements.—Two-roomed tenements are intended for allotment to workers whose income does not exceed Rs. 350 per mensem; one-roomed tenements may be allotted to workers with an income not exceeding Rs. 250 per mensem. There is no lower-income limit in either case.

The allotment of the tenements will be governed by the Allotment Rules given in Appendix F to this Scheme.

14. General.—(a) In this Scheme, the Central Government bears the major share of the financial burden of the housing programme. It is expected that the State Governments will meet any short-fall in the maintenance charges of the housing estates to be constructed by them or by the Housing Boards. The establishment charges on the schemes taken up by the State Governments and Housing Boards or any agency other than private employers, will also have to be borne by the State Governments. It is understood that the provision of schools, dispensaries and other amenities for these housing estates will be made by local authorities concerned in the normal course. In regard to municipal rates and taxes, it is suggested that the State Governments should persuade local authorities to allow a rebate of at least 50 per cent. on the general rate or house tax, at least for an initial period of, say, 10 years. This will help in reducing the rents. The Central Government will do their best to secure the supply of building materials and transport.

(b) This Scheme is expected to be in force till the year 1955-56, though such changes as may be found desirable and necessary by Government will be made therein from time to time. The operation of the Scheme may be extended beyond the year 1955-56 for such period² as might be considered necessary.

INDUSTRIAL RELATIONS LEGISLATION

International Standards on Industrial Relations

From 1921 to 1952, the International Labour Conference has adopted the following three Conventions and three Recommendations on Industrial Relations.

Right of Association (Agriculture) Convention No. 11 adopted in 1921 deals with the rights of association and combination of agricultural workers and requires every member ratifying the Convention to secure for all agricultural workers the same rights of association and combination like industrial workers. This Convention was ratified by India in 1923.

Freedom of Association and Protection of the Right to Organise Convention No. 87 adopted in 1948 provides that workers and employers have the right to establish and join organisations of their own choosing without previous authorisation and further provides that workers' and employers' organisations have the right to draw up their constitutions and rules and organise their administration and activities and formulate their programmes without any intervention of public authorities and affirms the right of these organisations to join federations and confederations and to affiliate with international organisations.

Right to Organise and Bargain Collectively Convention No. 98 adopted in 1949 concerns the application of the principles of the right to organise and bargain collectively and ensures free exercise of trade union rights by providing for the workers adequate protection against acts of anti-union discrimination regarding their employment and further provides for adoption of measures to encourage and promote full development and utilisation of machinery for voluntary negotiation between employers' and workers' organisations, with a view to the regulation of the terms and conditions of employment by means of collective agreements.

Collective Agreements Recommendation No. 91 adopted in 1951 calls for establishment of Collective Bargaining Machinery to negotiate, conclude, revise and renew collective agreements. "Collective Agreements" mean all agreements in writing regarding working conditions and terms of employment concluded between an employer on the one hand and representative workers' organisation on the other.

Voluntary Conciliation and Arbitration Recommendation No. 92 adopted in 1951 calls for the establishment of voluntary conciliation machinery to assist in the prevention and settlement of industrial disputes between the employers and workers and provides that if a dispute has been submitted to voluntary arbitration for final settlement, the parties shall abstain from strikes and lock-outs and accept the arbitration award.

Co-operation at the Level of the Undertaking Recommendation No. 98 adopted in 1952 concerns consultation and co-operation between employers and workers at the level of the undertaking and provides that such consultation and co-operation should be promoted between the employers and workers at the level of undertaking on matters of mutual concern not within the scope of collective bargaining machinery nor dealt with by other machinery concerned with the terms and conditions of employment.

Indian Legislation on Industrial Relations

Ahmedabad Experiment

There was no legislative provision for settlement of industrial disputes in India prior to the enactment of the Trade Disputes Act in 1929. The Employers and Workmen (Disputes) Act of 1860, repealed in 1932, provided for speedy determination of disputes relating to wages of certain category of workmen.

In Ahmedabad cotton mill industry, a novel technique of labour-management relations was initiated at the instance of Mahatma Gandhi. Since 1920, there was a permanent arbitration board consisting of the representatives of labour and employers. It was mutually agreed between the Ahmedabad Millowners' Association and the Ahmedabad Labour Union that all grievances should, in the first instance, be discussed between the workers themselves and the management of the mills concerned. If no settlement was arrived at, the matter was reported by the Labour Union to the Millowners' Association and discussion was held for amicable settlement. In case no settlement was made, the matter was finally referred to the permanent arbitration board.

The special feature of the Ahmedabad experiment is that labour disputes can best be settled by mutual negotiation and voluntary arbitration. A Collective Agreement was also executed on the 8th July, 1952 for settlement of all disputes by voluntary arbitration. After expiry of this agreement, two agreements were executed on the 27th June, 1955—one for principles governing payment of Bonus for five years and the other for settlement of all industrial disputes by voluntary arbitration.

Sri Somnath P. Dave, Secretary of the Ahmedabad Textile Labour Association explained the genesis of the 1952 agreement as follows: "It must be said that this agreement is in a manner of speaking, the result of the realisation on the part of both the parties that the system of settlement through law courts and continuing maintenance of a state of frayed tempers and emotional excitement worsens rather than improves the industrial situation, at any given time. In the atmosphere engendered by appeals and counter-appeals, legal quibbling, reference to Labour Courts, the Supreme Court and so on, the Trade Union cannot grow to its full stature, nor can the industrialist have peace or advantage."¹

Trade Disputes Act, 1929 (VI of 1929)

The Trade Disputes Act was undertaken by the Central Government on the model of the Industrial Courts Act, 1919 (U.K.) for providing a conciliation machinery to bring about peaceful settlement of industrial disputes. The Act contains provisions for rendering lightning strikes in public utility concerns a punishable offence on the model of Trade Disputes and Trade Unions Act of 1927 (U.K.). The Act was amended in 1938 authorising Central and Provincial Governments to appoint Conciliation Officers for mediating or promoting settlement of trade disputes. The Act was not properly applied by the Central and Provincial Governments for settlement of industrial disputes.

Royal Commission on Labour in India, 1931

The Royal Commission on Labour in their report noted the demand for introduction of compulsory method for settling trade disputes, but did not agree to it and remarked, "We believe that the effect on industry would be disastrous if there was general tendency to look to some external authority to preserve industrial peace and to discourage settlement by industry itself."² The Commission regretted that conciliation which was the most useful form of State assistance was scarcely employed in India and "India has tried to copy the less valuable part of the machinery employed in Great Britain while ignoring the most valuable part."³

Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 (XIV of 1947)

During the war, certain emergency measures were adopted by the Central Government under 81A of the Defence of India Rules, for settlement of industrial disputes by compulsory reference to conciliation and arbitration and for prohibiting strikes and lock-outs during these proceedings. The Industrial Disputes Act of 1947 was based on the main provisions of this emergency legislation and for the first time compulsory methods of settlement of industrial disputes were adopted in India.

Resolution on Industrial Truce, 1947

A tripartite Conference to discuss some urgent problems relating to industrial development in India and to bring industrial peace, was convened by the Industry and Supply Minister of the Government of India, in December, 1947. The Resolution on Industrial Truce which was unanimously adopted by the representatives of Governments, employers and industrial labour, recommended (1) fullest use of statutory and other machinery for resolution of industrial disputes in a just and peaceful manner, (2) establishment of machinery for study and determination of fair wages and conditions of labour and fair remuneration to capital and methods for labour's association in all matters concerning industrial production and (3) constitution of works committees for settlement of day-to-day disputes and called upon labour and management to maintain industrial peace and to avert lock-outs, strikes or slowing down of production during the next three years.

Proposal for New Industrial Relations Legislation

After prolonged discussions in different tripartite conferences and committees, two comprehensive Bills on Labour Relations and Trade Unions were introduced in the Parliament in January, 1950 by the Labour Minister Sri Jagjiwan Ram, but they lapsed when the Parliament dissolved for general election.

Sri V. V. Giri, after becoming Labour Minister, circulated an elaborate Questionnaire on Industrial Relations, in July, 1952, covering both industrial relations and trade unions, to all Governments, employers' and workers' organisations for their views and comments. The matter was discussed in the twelfth session of the Indian Labour Conference held at Naini Tal in October, 1952.

Sri Giri's speech in the conference covered the entire ground of industrial relations and his method of approach was to improve the unsatisfactory relations which were the results of legislative enactments. In the concluding speech he remarked: "On the question of basic policy, it is abundantly clear that all sections of the House without exception wish to see a much greater measure of emphasis being placed on collective bargaining and mutual settlement of disputes through voluntary conciliation and voluntary arbitration."⁴

Planning Commission on Industrial Relations

In the First Five Year Plan, the Planning Commission recommended that there should be harmonious relations between capital and labour and industrial relations should be so developed as to enable the worker to take a greater share in the working of the industry and there should be closest co-operation at all levels between employers and workers for increased production. The Commission further recommended that "the workers' right to association, organisation and collective bargaining should be accepted as fundamental to the mutual relations of labour and capital" and difference between capital and labour should be settled in a spirit of mutual adjustment, impartial investigation and arbitration.

In the Second Five Year Plan, the Planning Commission suggested that the best solution to common problems of labour can best be settled by mutual agreement. The Commission stressed the importance of preventive measures for achieving industrial peace and placed great emphasis "on the avoidance of disputes at all levels, including the last stage of mutual negotiations, namely, conciliation" and suggested introduction of the system of conciliation machinery to keep in touch with trade union leaders and employers when there is no dispute and to discuss the matters likely to cause dispute in future. The Commission suggested recourse to mutual negotiation and voluntary arbitration in case of disputes and proposed suitable machinery by the Central and State Governments for facilitating these stages. The Commission proposed joint consultative machinery at all levels and association of labour with management.

Industrial Disputes (Amendment and Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1956 (XXXVI of 1956)

As discussed in the Joint Consultative Board of Industry and Labour and as approved in the Second Five Year Plan, the Central Government enacted the above legislation amending the Industrial Disputes Act, simplifying the procedure of adjudication through Labour Courts, Industrial Tribunals and National Tribunals, abolishing the Labour Appellate Tribunal and removing difficulties experienced by employers in the administration of section 33 of the Act. The Amending Act also made certain essential amendments to the Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act, 1946 empowering the Certifying Officer and Appellate Authority to take into account the fairness or reasonableness of standing orders before certification.

Present Industrial Relations Legislations in India

The existing laws on the subject are being discussed under the following headings:

- (1) Industrial Employment Standing Orders Legislation
- (2) Trade Union Legislation
- (3) Industrial Dispute Legislation

Standing Orders in Industrial Establishments

Standing orders defining conditions of service, viz., recruitment, discharge, disciplinary action, holidays, leave etc., tend to minimise friction between the workers and their employers in industrial undertakings. The tripartite Labour Conference discussed the subject in 1943, 1944 and 1945 and decided in favour of such legislation.

Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act, 1946 (XX of 1946)

A Bill providing for framing of standing orders defining conditions of employment in all industrial establishments employing one hundred or more workers was introduced by the Central Government in the Legislative Assembly on 8th April, 1946. The Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act, 1946 (XX of 1946) which came into force on 23rd April, 1946 applies to a wide range of industrial enterprises, including factories, railways, mines, quarries or oil fields, plantations, workshops, inland steamer vessels, docks, wharves or jetties, and tramways or motor omnibus services employing 100 or more workers. The Act extends to the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir.

Main Provisions of Act XX of 1946

The main provision of the Act is to require employers of industrial establishments employing 100 or more workers to frame draft standing orders relating to the terms of service governing the employment of the workers and submit five copies thereof to the Certifying Officer for certification. The Certifying Officer is required to forward one copy to the trade union or in its absence to the workers for giving them an opportunity of raising objections. The Certifying Officer is empowered to modify or add to the draft standing orders and there is a right of appeal against his decision. The Act does not apply to those industries to which the provisions of Chapter V of the Bombay Industrial Disputes Act, 1938¹ (standing orders regarding industries) applied before the passing of the Act. The Act requires the display of the standing orders in English and in the language of the majority of the workers near the entrance to the factory and in the departments. Standing orders, as finally certified cannot be modified, except on an agreement between the employer and the workmen, until the expiry of six months.

The Central Government and the State Governments are empowered to extend the scope of the Act to any other class of industrial employment or exempt it from all or any of the provisions.

Administration of the Act

The Act is administered in the case of railways, major ports, mines, oilfields by the Central Government and in all other concerns by the State Governments. The Central Government have appointed the Chief Labour Commissioner (Central) to exercise the functions of the Appellate Authority and the Regional Labour Commissioners to perform duties of Certifying Officers. The State Governments have appointed Certifying Officers and Appellate Authorities for the purposes of the Act.

Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Rules, 1946

The Government of India published the Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Central Rules, 1946 on the 18th December, 1946 containing model standing orders. These Rules apply to industrial establishments under the control of the Central Government, railways, major ports, mines and oilfields throughout India.

Industrial Employment (Standing) Orders Rules were also framed by the State Governments and industrial establishments employing 100 workers or more have been advised to adopt the model standing orders contained therein.

Extension of the Act by State Governments

In May, 1949 the Government of Assam extended the Act to all industrial establishments (except mines, quarries, oilfields and railways) which employed 18 or more workers. The Government of Uttar Pradesh extended the Act to electric supply undertakings, water works and industrial establishments engaged in glass industry as well as to the member establishments of the Employers' Association of Northern India and U. P. Oil Millowners' Association. In November, 1950, the U. P. Government extended the Act to all industrial establishments employing less than 100 workers if the employers voluntarily apply for certification. In January, 1952 the Government of West Bengal extended the Act to all industrial establishments employing 50 or more workers.

Amendment of the Act by State Governments

The Government of Saurashtra passed the Industrial Employment Standing Orders (Saurashtra Amendment) Act in 1953 providing for application of the model standing orders notified by the State Government to an industrial establishment until the standing orders in respect of that establishment comes into operation. This amendment was undertaken for the purpose of eliminating the difficulties and inconveniences due to the delay in the matter of certification of standing orders.

The Government of Bombay amended the Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act 1956 in 1955 and extending the definitions of the words "workmen" and employer".

Industrial Disputes (Amendment and Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1956 (XXXVI of 1956)

The Amending Act empowers the Certifying Officer and the Appellate Authority to examine the fairness or reasonableness of the standing orders before they are certified. It confers a right on the workmen to take steps to modify the standing orders. It amends and extends the definition of "workman." It further provides that if any question arises between the parties as to the application and interpretation of the standing orders, the same may be referred to the Labour Court by either of the parties without intervention of the appropriate Government.

INDUSTRIAL EMPLOYMENT (STANDING ORDERS) ACT, 1946 (XX OF 1946)

Statement of Objects and Reasons¹

Experience has shown that 'standing orders' defining the conditions of recruitment, discharge, disciplinary action, holidays, leave, etc., go a long way towards minimising friction between the management and workers in industrial undertakings. Discussion on the subject at the tripartite Indian Labour Conference revealed a consensus of opinion in favour of legislation. The Bill accordingly seeks to provide for the framing of 'standing orders' in all industrial establishments employing one hundred or more workers.

In the first instance the Act will apply to the categories of industrial establishments specified in clause (2) (e), which include, besides factories and railways, mines, quarries and oilfields, tramway or motor, omnibus services, docks, wharves and jetties, inland steam vessels, plantations and workshops. Government will be competent to extend the Act to other classes of industrial establishments or to grant exemptions where necessary, by notification.

Within 6 months from the date on which the Act becomes applicable to an industrial establishment the employer is required to frame draft 'standing orders' and submit them to the Certifying Officer for certification. The draft should cover all the matters specified in the Schedule to the Act and any other matters that Government may prescribe by rules. The Certifying Officer will be empowered to modify or add to the draft standing orders so as to render them certifiable under the Act. It will not be his function (nor of the Appellate Authority) to adjudicate upon their fairness or reasonableness.² There will be a right of appeal against the decisions of the Certifying Officers.

as a result of the discontinuance of the shift, no permanent employee will be discharged. If as a result of discontinuance of shift working, any permanent workmen are to be discharged, they shall be discharged having regard to the length of their service in the establishment, those with the shortest term of service being discharged first. If the leave is refused or postponed, the fact of such refusal or postponement and the reasons therefor shall be recorded in writing in a register to be maintained for the purpose, and if the worker so desires, a copy of the entry in the register shall be supplied to him. (3) If the workman remains absent beyond the period of leave originally granted or subsequently extended, he shall lose his lien on his appointment unless he (a) returns within 8 days of the expiry of the leave and (b) explains to the satisfaction of the manager his inability to return before the expiry of his leave. In case the workman loses his lien on his appointment, he shall be entitled to be kept on the 'badli' list.

10. Casual leave.—A workman may be granted casual leave of absence with or without pay not exceeding 10 days in the aggregate in a calendar year. Such leave shall not be for more than three days at a time except in case of sickness. Such leave is intended to meet special circumstances which cannot be foreseen. Ordinarily, the previous permission of the head of the department in the establishment shall be obtained before such leave is taken, but when this is not possible, the head of the department shall, as soon as may be practicable, be informed in writing of the absence from and of the probable duration of such absence.

11. Payment of wages.—(1) Any wages, due to the workman but not paid on the usual pay day on account of their being unclaimed, shall be paid by the employer on an unclaimed wage pay day in each week, which shall be notified on the notice boards as aforesaid.

The workmen shall not ordinarily be required to remain for more than two hours after the commencement of the stoppage. If the period of detention does not exceed one hour the workmen so detained shall not be paid for the period of detention. If the period of detention exceeds one hour, the workmen so detained shall be entitled to receive wages for the whole of the time during which they are detained as a result of the stoppage. In the case of piece-rate workers, the average daily earning for the previous month shall be taken to be the daily wage. No other compensation will be admissible in case of such stoppages. Whenever practicable, reasonable notice shall be given of resumption of normal work.

(3) In case where workmen are laid off for short periods on account of failure of plant or a temporary curtailment of production, the period of unemployment shall be treated as compulsory leave either with or without pay, as the case may be. When, however, workmen have to be laid off for an indefinitely long period, their services may be terminated after giving them due notice or pay in lieu thereof.

(4) The employer may in the event of a strike affecting either wholly or partially any section or department of the establishment close down either wholly or partially such section or department and any other section or department affected by such closing down. The fact of such closure shall be notified by notices put on the notice board in the section or department concerned and in the timekeeper's office, if any, as soon as practicable. The workmen concerned shall also be notified by a general notice, prior to resumption of work, as to when work will be resumed.

13. Termination of employment.—(1) For terminating employment of a permanent workman, notice in writing shall be given either by the employer or the workman—one month's notice in the case of monthly-rated workmen and two weeks' notice in the case of other workmen: one month's or two weeks' pay, as the case may be, may be paid in lieu of notice.

(2) No temporary workman whether monthly-rated, weekly-rated or piece-rated and no probationer or badli shall be entitled to any notice or pay in lieu thereof if his services are terminated, but the services of a temporary workman shall not be terminated as a punishment unless he has been given an opportunity of explaining the charges of misconduct alleged against him in the manner prescribed in paragraph 14.

(3) Where the employment of any workman is terminated the wages earned by him and other dues, if any, shall be paid before the expiry of the second working day from the day on which his employment is terminated.

TRADE UNION LEGISLATION

Early Trade Unionism in India

The origin of trade unionism in India may be traced back to 1890 when workers of Bombay organised a union called the Bombay Millhands Association. The first recorded case of collective representation of their claims by the workers was made in 1884 by the labour leader Mr. M. N. Lokhanday who organised a conference of factory workers to draw up a memorandum to the Factory Commission appointed by the Government of Bombay. Since 1918 trade unions have been growing both in number and volume. The trade unions did not enjoy legal status and the workers' right to organise and strike for furtherance of their own interest was not recognised under the law.

The decision of the Madras High Court in 1921, following the common law in England which regarded trade unionism as illegal conspiracy, in the Buckingham and Carnatic Mills case granting an injunction restraining Madras Textile Labour Union officials from influencing labourers to break their contract with the employers by means of strike with a view to obtain increased wages, focussed public attention to the necessity of giving legal recognition to workers' right to organise and strike in defence of their legitimate interests.

Resolution of Indian Legislative Assembly in 1921

On the 1st March, 1921, on the initiative of the late Sri N. M. Joshi, the Legislative Assembly adopted a resolution to take steps to introduce legislation for registration of trade unions and protection of bonafide trade union activities. The Government of India accepted the resolution in a slightly modified form and after consulting the State Governments drew up a Bill providing for the registration of trade unions and introduced the same in the Legislative Assembly on 31st August, 1925. The Indian Trade Unions Act was passed in 1926 (XVI of 1926) and came into force on 1st June, 1927.

Main Provisions of the Indian Trade Unions Act, 1926

The main object of the Act is to give registered trade unions a legal and corporate status and their executives and members immunity from civil and criminal liability in respect of strikes. The Act defines the legal positions of trade unions and provides for their registration. An association of workers, if organised for legitimate trade union purposes, can apply to the Registrar appointed by the State Government for registration and obtain a Registration Certificate. The general funds of a trade union must be spent for certain specified objects intended to promote the interests of its members. A trade union can create a fund for civic and political interests of its members, but the contribution to it must be voluntary. Outsiders are allowed to be on an union's executive committee, but at least half of the total number of office-bearers of a registered union must be employed in the industry concerned. The minimum age for admission to membership is 15 and to executive office is 18. Every registered union has to maintain a list of members and has to send an annual statement of its income and expenditure, assets and liabilities in the prescribed form to the Registrar to whom the changes of office-bearers should also be intimated. Infringement of the provisions is punishable with a maximum fine of Rs. 500/- and the offence is triable by a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class.

Indian Trade Unions (Amendment) Act, 1928 (XV of 1928)

With a view to clearly define the procedure regarding appeal against the decision of a Registrar refusing to register a trade union or withdrawing a Registration Certificate, the Act was amended in 1928.

Central Trade Union Regulations, 1939

The Act as adapted by the Government of India (Adaptation of Indian Laws) Order, 1937 vested in the Central Government the powers of the State Governments in respect of trade unions whose activities are not confined to one State. The Central Government framed the Central Trade Union Regulations in 1939 and appointed the Central Registrar for regulating such unions.

Recognition of Unions by Employers

Very few of the registered unions have been recognised by the employers. There is at present no obligation on the part of the employers to recognise registered trade unions. It was felt that with the existing conditions in India, there should be some legal obligation on the part of the employers to recognise truly representative trade unions. The Royal Commission on Labour in India deprecated obligatory recognition but pleaded for the recognition of unions by employers. The position regarding voluntary recognition has not improved as expected and the question of recognition is a recurring source of friction between the employers and workers.

Indian Trade Unions (Amendment) Act, 1947 (XLV of 1947)

The Government of India after discussions with the State Governments, employers' and workers' representatives in the different sessions of the Indian Labour Conference and Standing Labour Committee, introduced the Indian Trade Unions (Amendment) Bill in the Central Legislature on the 14th February, 1946 to amend the Indian Trade Unions Act, 1926 providing for obligatory recognition of representative trade unions by employers by an order of the Labour Court. The Bill was referred to Select Committee which submitted report on the 28th February, 1947 making several suggestions. The Bill was passed on the 19th November, 1947 and received the assent of the Governor-General on the 20th December, 1947.

The Amending Act provides for compulsory recognition of trade unions satisfying certain prescribed conditions and penalising unfair practices by recognised trade unions as well as by employers. Two new chapters dealing with recognition of trade unions and unfair practices have been inserted in the existing Act.

The Amending Act provides that a registered union which has applied to an employer for recognition and has failed to obtain recognition within three months may apply to the Labour Court (to be set up) for recognition by the employer. If the Labour Court, after due investigation, is satisfied that the trade union concerned fulfils the conditions for recognition laid down in the Act and is fit to be recognised by the employer, it shall make an order directing such recognition. The Act confers on the executive of a registered trade union the right to negotiate with employers in respect of matters connected with the employment or non-employment or the terms of employment or the conditions of work of all or any of its members. The Act defines certain practices as unfair on the part of a recognised union or an employer and provides for withdrawal of recognition on application to the Labour Court by the Registrar or the employer in the case of former and a fine upto Rs. 1,000/- in the case of the latter.

Draft Indian Trade Unions Recognition Regulations, 1949

Draft Regulations framed by the Central Government under the Amending Act of 1947 prescribing the procedure to be followed by the Labour Court in the matter of recognition of trade unions and applicable to trade unions consisting of workmen employed by the Central Government or by railway, major port, mine or oilfield, was published in the Gazette of India on the 29th January, 1949 for eliciting public opinion. The draft has not yet been finalised.

Revision of the Indian Trade Unions Act, 1926

The Central Government decided not to enforce the Amending Act of 1947 pending consideration of certain further amendments to the original Act. Amendment to the Indian Trade Unions Act, 1926, with a view to secure greater control over the working of the registered trade unions was one of the items on the agenda of the eleventh meeting of the Standing Labour Committee held in New Delhi in January, 1949.

The conference of Labour Ministers held at New Delhi in January, 1949 while discussing about the implementation of the Freedom of Association Convention No. 87 adopted by the International Labour Conference at San Francisco in 1948, considered further amendment to the Indian Trade Unions Act, 1926 and enforcement of the Indian Trade Unions (Amendment) Act, 1947. "Regarding inclusion of outsiders in the management of unions, it was recommended that the present provision in the Act which restricts outsiders to one-half of the total number of officers of a registered trade union should be amended to one-fourth or four whichever is less.”¹

Trade Unions Bill, 1950 (Bill No. 14 of 1950)²

On the basis of the above discussions, the Trade Unions Bill was introduced in the Parliament on the 23rd February, 1950 providing for registration and recognition of trade unions and defining the law relating to registered and recognised trade unions and certain unfair practices.

The Bill was of a comprehensive and consolidating nature. The following were the main features of the Bill:—(1) the armed forces and police were excluded from its scope; (2) trade unions of civil servants were not permitted to have outsiders on their executive committee; (3) other trade unions should not have more than four outsiders or one-fourth of the total number of executive, whichever was less; (4) the conditions entitling a trade union to registration were enlarged; (5) registered trade unions were to be inspected by officers appointed for the purpose;

² Statement of Objects and Reasons of the Trade Unions Bill, 1950—The Trade Unions Bill is primarily a consolidating measure, but there are a few new provisions. In the interests of discipline, the armed forces and the police have been excluded from its scope.

2. The conditions which entitle a trade union to registration have been enlarged. The rules of a trade union should hereafter mention the rate of subscription payable by members, the circumstances, including default in payment of subscription, in which the name of a member shall be struck off the list of members, the procedure for taking disciplinary action against members who go on a strike or lock-out without the sanction of the executive or who violate the rules of the trade union, and the procedure for taking disciplinary action against the members of the executive and other officers for violation of the provisions of the Act or of the rules of the trade union. It is also proposed to lay down that the rules of a trade union which is composed wholly or partly of civil servants should prohibit all its members from participating in any form of political activity and provide for the expulsion of offending members. The registration of a trade union is liable to be cancelled if it has wilfully, and after notice from the Registrar, contravened any provisions of the Act or of its own rules or failed to comply with a binding award, order or agreement.

3. Government employees, whether civil servants or not, will be debarred from contributing to political funds though there will be no such ban on members who are not Government employees.

4. It is proposed to debar outsiders from becoming officers of the executive of a trade union which consists wholly or partly of civil servants. In other trade unions their proportion has been reduced to four or one-fourth of the total number of the executive, whichever is less. Where a trade union commits an unfair practice as defined in the Bill, office-bearers who are outsiders will be liable to be debarred from holding any office in any trade union for a period of three years.

5. Civil servants hold a key position in the administration of any country and particularly of a country which has started on its career of independence amidst such economic and other difficulties as we find in India to-day. While their very position entitles them to every safeguard necessary for their well-being and progress, they should not be exposed to the temptation of resorting to methods which are available to industrial labour in every country. With this object in view, the Bill provides that a trade union of civil servants will not be entitled to compulsory recognition by appropriate Government if it does not consist wholly of civil servants or if it is affiliated to a federation, to which trade union of persons other than civil servants are also affiliated. Similarly, a trade union of employees of hospitals or educational institutions will not be entitled to compulsory recognition by order of a Labour Court if it does not consist wholly of employees of hospitals or educational institutions as the case may be. The same restriction to the association with other categories of employees applies to supervisors and the watch and ward staff. Where there are two or more trade unions qualified for recognition, only the larger one will be entitled to such recognition.

6. Provision has also been made for the settlement of disputes relating to the election of members of the executive or other officers of a trade union by the Labour Courts. (Gazette of India, Part V, dated the 4th March, 1950).

(6) where there were two or more trade unions qualified for registration, only the larger one would be entitled to recognition; (7) registered trade union should maintain lists of members, subscription registers, account books, etc. in the prescribed form; (8) Labour Courts would settle disputes relating to election of office bearers; (9) registration of trade union was liable to be cancelled if it wrongfully contravened any provision of the Act or of its own rules or failed to comply with a binding award, order or agreement.

The Bill was discussed in the tenth session of the Indian Labour Conference held at Delhi in March, 1950. The Bill was referred to the Select Committee whose report was presented to the Parliament on the 1st December, 1950. The Bill, however, lapsed with the desolution of the Parliament.

Proposal for New Legislation

As the Trade Unions Bill and Labour Relations Bill lapsed, the Government of India thought it advisable to consult all interested parties with a view to arrive at a greater degree of agreement on all important and controversial issues. The Ministry of Labour issued a detailed Questionnaire on Industrial Relations covering all aspects of both the Industrial Disputes and Trade Unions Acts. The Questionnaire was the principal subject matter of discussion at the twelfth session of the Indian Labour Conference held at Naini Tal in October, 1952.

Planning Commission on Trade Unions

The First Five Year Plan recognised the importance of a strong and healthy trade union movement and the worker's right to association, organisation and collective bargaining.

The Second Five Year Plan recommended building up strong trade unions with a view to safeguard the interests of labour and recognition of representative unions under certain conditions. The Commission suggested that the unions should depend more on their own organised strength than on outsiders and should improve the finance from their internal sources.

INDIAN TRADE UNIONS ACT, 1926 (XVI OF 1926)

Statement of Objects and Reasons¹

This Bill has been prescribed in response to the following Resolution which was adopted by the Legislative Assembly on 1st March, 1924:

"This Assembly recommends to the Governor-General in Council that he should take steps to introduce, as soon as practicable, in the Indian Legislature, such legislation as may be necessary for the registration of Trade Unions".

The question was examined in detail by the Government of India and Local Governments were consulted and public opinion was invited. In the light of opinions received a draft Bill was prepared and published in September, 1924. The Government of India, after considering the criticisms received on that Bill, see no ground for modifying the general principles underlying the Bill, and except for minor alterations, the present Bill is a reproduction of the Bill previously published.

The general scheme of the Bill is that a Trade Union making the necessary application will, on compliance with certain stated conditions designed to ensure that the Union is a bonafide Trade Union, and that adequate safeguards are provided for the rights of its members, be entitled to registration. The Union and its members will thereupon receive protection in certain cases in respect of both civil and criminal liability. No restriction is placed upon the objects which a registered Trade Union may pursue, but the expenditure of its funds must be limited to specified Trade Union purposes. The legal position of Trade Unions which do not register will be unaffected by the Bill.

Statement of Objects and Reasons¹

It has long been felt that with existing conditions in India, there should be some obligation on the part of employers to recognise Trade Unions provided they are truly representative. The Trade Unions Act, 1926, provides for registration of the Unions, but there is no obligation on the employers to recognise any registered trade unions. The Royal Commission on Labour pleading for recognition in the spirit as well as in the letter, deprecated obligatory recognition feeling that it would not secure genuine and full recognition which the Commission desired to seek. The position has not, however, improved in regard to voluntary recognition by employers. The Bill, therefore, provides for obligatory recognition of representative trade unions. The question as to whether a trade union is representative or not will, in the event of dispute, be considered by an industrial court to be set up for the purpose.

The Bill specifies certain acts as unfair practices on the part of recognised trade unions and certain other acts as unfair practices on the part of the employers. Provision has been made enabling withdrawal of recognition where an unfair practice is committed by the executive or members of a recognised trade union or when the trade union has ceased to be a representative trade union or on the failure of the trade union to submit any return prescribed in the Bill. An unfair practice on the part of an employer has been made an offence punishable with fine.

"CHAPTER IIIA—RECOGNITION OF TRADE UNIONS

28A. Modification of the definition of "appropriate Government" for certain purposes.—Notwithstanding anything to the contrary in the definition of "the appropriate Government" in section 2, the Central Government shall be deemed to be the appropriate Government for the purposes of this Chapter in respect of Trade Unions consisting of workmen employed by the Central Government or by a Federal Railway or in a major port, mine or oilfield.

Explanation.—In this section and for the purposes of this Chapter, a Trade Union of which not less than fifty per cent. of the members are workmen employed by the Central Government or by a Federal Railway or in a major port, mine or oilfield shall be deemed to be a Trade Union consisting of workmen employed by the Central Government or by a Federal Railway or in a major port, mine or oilfield as the case may be.

28B. Appointment, constitution, powers and procedure of Labour Courts.—(1) For the purposes of this Chapter, the appropriate Government shall appoint such number of Labour Courts as it considers necessary, consisting of one or more persons each of whom—

(3) The proceedings of Labour Courts shall be regulated and conducted in such manner as may be prescribed.

28C. Recognition by agreement.—(1) Where an employer agrees to recognize a Trade Union, a memorandum of agreement signed by the employer and the officers of the Trade Union, or their authorised representatives, may be presented to the Registrar who shall record the memorandum in a register in the prescribed manner.

(2) Such an agreement may be revoked by either party thereto on application made to the Registrar in the prescribed manner.

(3) While such an agreement is in force, the Trade Union shall, in its relations with the employer with whom the agreement is made, have all the rights of a recognized Trade Union under this Act, and shall for all other purposes be deemed to be a recognized Trade Union.

28D. Conditions for recognition by order of a Labour Court.—A Trade Union shall not be entitled to recognition by order of a Labour Court under section 28E unless it fulfils the following conditions, namely:—

(a) that all its ordinary members are workmen employed in the same industry or in industries closely allied to or connected with one another;

(b) that it is representative of all the workmen employed by the employer in that industry or those industries;

Provided that the reference in clause (b) to “the employer” shall as respects recognition by an association of employers, be construed as a reference to all the employers who are members of the association.

28E. Application to, and grant of recognition by, Labour Courts.—

(1) Where a registered Trade Union having applied for recognition to an employer has failed to obtain recognition within a period of three months from the date of making such application, it may apply in writing, setting out such particulars as may be prescribed, to the Labour Court for recognition by that employer.

(2) A single application may be made under sub-section (1) for recognition—

(a) by more than one employer, or (b) by an association of employers as well as one or more members thereof.

(4) The Labour Court shall, after serving notice in the prescribed manner on the employer, investigate whether the Trade Union fulfils the condition for recognition set out in section 28D, and in deciding whether the condition set out in clause (b), thereof is fulfilled, the Labour Court shall have regard to, but shall not be bound by, the fact whether the proportion which the number of the workmen referred to in the said clause who are members of the Trade Union and are not in arrears of their subscription for any period exceeding three months, bears to the total number of such workmen is less, or not less, than such percentage, if any, as may be prescribed in this behalf, either generally, or in respect of any particular locality or any particular employer, or class of employers, or any particular industry or class of industries.

(5) If the Labour Court is satisfied that the Trade Union is fit to be recognized by the employer, it shall make an order directing such recognition and may, where the recognition is to be by an association of employers, further direct, by the same or a subsequent order, recognition by every member of the association in relation to whom the Trade Union fulfils the condition set out in clause (b) of section 28D.

(6) Every order made under sub-section (5) shall be forwarded to the appropriate Government which shall notify it in the official Gazette, and while a recognition directed by such order is in force the Trade Union shall, in its relations with the employer concerned, have all the rights of a recognized Trade Union under this Act and shall for all other purposes be deemed to be a recognized Trade Union.

28F. Rights of recognised Trade Unions.—(1) The executive of a recognised Trade Union shall be entitled to negotiate with employers in respect of matters connected with the employment or non-employment or the terms of employment or the conditions of labour of all or any of its members, and the employer shall receive and send replies to letters sent by the executive on, and grant interviews to that body regarding, such matters.

(2) Nothing in sub-section (1) shall be construed as requiring an employer to send replies to letters on, or grant interviews regarding matters on which, as a result of previous discussion with the executive of the Trade Union, the employer has arrived at a conclusion, whether in agreement with the executive or not, unless a period of at least three months has elapsed since the said conclusion was intimated to the executive, or unless there has been a change in circumstances.

(3) Any dispute between the employer and the executive of a recognized Trade Union as to whether a conclusion has been arrived at, or whether there has been a change in circumstances, within the meaning of sub-section (2), shall be referred to the Registrar whose decision shall be final.

(4) The executive of a recognized Trade Union shall be entitled to display notices of the Trade Union in any premises where its members are employed, and the employer shall afford the executive reasonable facilities for that purpose.

28G. Withdrawal of recognition.—(1) Where the recognition of a Trade Union has been directed under section 28E, the Registrar or the employer may apply in writing to the Labour Court for withdrawal of the recognition on any of the following grounds, namely:—

(a) that the executive or the members of the Trade Union have committed any unfair practice set out in section 28J within three months prior to the date of the application;

(b) that the Trade Union has failed to submit any return referred to in section 28I;

(c) that the Trade Union has ceased to be representative of the workmen referred to in clause (b) of section 28D.

(2) On receipt of an application under sub-section (1) the Labour Court shall, unless it thinks fit to dismiss the application summarily, serve notice in the prescribed manner on the Trade Union to show cause why its recognition should not be withdrawn.

(3) If after giving a reasonable opportunity to the Trade Union to show cause the Labour Court is satisfied that the Trade Union is no longer fit to be recognized, it shall make an order declaring that the recognition of the Trade Union has been withdrawn, and forward a copy of the order to the appropriate Government which shall notify it in the official Gazette.

28H. Application for fresh recognition.—On the expiry of not less than six months from the date of withdrawal of recognition of a Trade Union under sub-section (3) of section 28G, the Trade Union, if it continues to be a registered Trade Union, may again apply for recognition, and the procedure laid down in this Act shall apply in respect of such application as if it were an original application for recognition.

28I. Recognised Trade Unions to submit prescribed returns.—Every Trade Union recognized under section 28E shall submit to the Registrar at the prescribed time and in the prescribed manner such returns, in addition to those referred to in section 28, as may be prescribed.

Provided that the refusal of an employer to permit his workmen to engage in Trade Union activities during their hours of work shall not be deemed to be an unfair practice on his part."

(2) Where a Criminal Court imposes a fine, or confirms in appeal, revision or otherwise a sentence of fine imposed, on an employer for committing an unfair practice set out in clause (c) or clause (d) of section 28K, it may, when passing judgment, order the whole or any part of the fine to be applied in the payment to any person of compensation for loss or injury caused by the unfair practice."

INDUSTRIAL DISPUTE LEGISLATIONEarly Industrial Dispute Legislation

The growth of the industrial dispute legislation may be traced back as early as 1860 when at the instance of the Bombay Government, the Government of India passed the Employers and Workmen (Disputes) Act, 1860 (X of 1860) providing for speedy and summary disposal by magistrates of disputes concerning wages of workmen employed in railways, canals and other public works and making the breach of contract a criminal offence. The Act was repealed in 1932 by the Employers and Workmen (Disputes) Repealing Act, 1932 (II of 1932).

Proposal for New Legislation

Prior to the first world war (1914-18), strike was a rare phenomenon in Indian industry and there were very few industrial disputes. Strikes appeared in violent forms after the war in 1920 and since then the strike fever is on the increase. In 1921 two Committees in Bengal and Bombay were appointed to investigate into the matter and to suggest remedial measures. The Bengal Committee suggested the formation of Joint Workers' Committees and opposed legislative measures and Government intervention. The Bombay Committee advocated the establishment of Industrial Courts. The general mill strike in 1924 led the Bombay Government to introduce a Bill, but its passage was withheld at the instance of the Government of India.

Trade Disputes Act, 1929 (VI of 1929)

On the model of the British Industrial Courts Acts, 1919 and the British Trade Disputes and Trade Unions Act, 1927, the first Indian Trade Disputes Act was passed in 1929 (VI of 1929) with the object of providing a conciliation machinery to bring about peaceful settlement of industrial disputes and rendering lightning strikes in public utility concerns a punishable offence. The Act came into force on 7th May, 1929.

Main Provisions of the Trade Disputes Act, 1929 (VI of 1929)

The Act authorises the Central or Provincial Governments to establish two Tribunals, e.g., the Board of Conciliation or the Court of Inquiry to investigate and settle a dispute when it arises or is apprehended. A Board shall consist of an independent Chairman with several members whereas a Court shall consist of one or more persons and have to report on specific matters referred to them. The Act contains provisions rendering punishable by fine or imprisonment lightning strikes or lock-outs without 14 days' notice in public utility concerns such as railways, postal, telegraph and telephone services, power, light or water-supplying services or any system of conservancy or sanitation and aims at prevention of political and general strikes on the lines of the British Act of 1927. Workers resorting to or inciting others to resort to illegal strikes are liable to be punished with 3 months' imprisonment or a fine of Rs. 200/- or both. The Act was an experimental measure and was to remain in force for five years.

Trade Disputes (Extending) Act, 1934 (XIII of 1934)

The Trade Disputes Act was experimental for 5 years and was due to expire on 7th May, 1934. The Trade Disputes (Extending) Act was enacted after consultation with the Provincial Governments to make the Act permanent and it received assent of the Governor-General on the 28th April, 1934.

Trade Disputes (Amendment) Act, 1938 (XI of 1938)

In order to give effect to the recommendations of the Royal Commission on Labour and in pursuance of an undertaking given in the Legislative Assembly in 1934, the Central Government introduced a Bill on 31st August, 1936 to further amend the Trade Disputes Act, 1929, and it was passed in 1938. The Act authorises Central and Provincial Governments to appoint Conciliation Officers for mediating in or promoting the settlement of trade disputes. The Act extends trade disputes to include disputes between employers and employees or between workmen and workmen and includes water transport and tramways under public utility service. The Act also makes the provision concerning illegal strikes and lock-outs less restrictive.

Emergency Legislation Relating to Industrial Disputes

Several emergency measures were adopted by the Central Government concerning industrial disputes during the war. In January, 1942, the Central Government added Rule 81A to the Defence of India Rules by a notification to restrain strikes and lock-outs. The new Rule empowered the Government (1) to make general or special order to prohibit strikes or lock-outs in connection with any trade dispute unless reasonable notice is given, (2) to refer any dispute to conciliation or adjudication, (3) to require employers to observe such terms and conditions as may be specified and (4) to enforce the decisions of the adjudicators.

In August, 1942, the Central Government promulgated an order under this Rule prohibiting strikes or lock-outs without 14 days' previous notice. Strikes or lock-outs were also prohibited during the pendency of conciliation or adjudication proceedings.

Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 (XIV of 1947)

Rule 81A of the Defence of India Rules was due to lapse on 1st October, 1946 and was kept in force by the Emergency Powers (Continuance) Ordinance, 1946. A Bill was introduced by the Government of India in the Legislative Assembly on the 28th October, 1946 embodying the essential principles of Rule 81A and retaining the provisions of Trade Disputes Act, 1929, with a view to make provisions for investigation and settlement of industrial disputes. The Industrial Disputes Act was passed in March, 1947 and came into force from 1st April, 1947 repealing the Trade Disputes Act, 1929.

First Legislation under Five Year Labour Programme

Under the Five Year Labour Programme, the Central Government, with a view to improve the existing industrial relations between the employers and the employees, proposed to enact a comprehensive legislation for avoiding strikes and lock-outs specially in public utility services and essential undertakings and for providing machinery for peaceful settlement of industrial disputes and constituting joint works committees for enquiring into and settling individual grievances and day-to-day difficulties. The Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 was the first legislative measure undertaken by the Government under the above Programme.

The Act introduced the principles of compulsory arbitration and prohibited strikes without notice in respect of public utility services. Two new institutions were also introduced—(1) Works Committee consisting of the representatives of employers and employees and (2) Industrial Tribunals consisting of one or more members possessing qualifications ordinarily required for appointments as a High Court judge.

Amendments to Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 in 1949, 1950, 1951 and 1952

Up to 1952, the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 was amended by (1) the Industrial Disputes (Banking and Insurance Companies) Act, 1949 (54 of 1949) which was enacted on the 15th December, 1949 to remove the difficulties created by piece-meal adjudication of banking and insurance companies having branches in more than one State and to replace the Industrial Disputes (Banking and Insurance Companies) Ordinance promulgated in April, 1949 and which made some minor changes. (2) The Industrial Disputes (Appellate Tribunal) Act, 1950 was passed on the 20th May, 1950 and the Act made provision for the establishment of a Labour Appellate Tribunal. Several important amendments were introduced extending the Act to the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir and relating to enforcement of awards, power of the Tribunals to hear complaints regarding alteration in the service conditions of workers during pendency of proceeding, representation of parties in the proceeding and recovery of money due from the employers. (3) The Industrial Disputes (Amendment and Temporary Provisions) Act, 1951 was enacted on the 27th June, 1951 as a result of the Supreme Court judgment declaring the awards of the All India Industrial (Bank Disputes) commonly known as Sen Tribunal as void on the ground of defects in the constitution of the said Tribunal and it introduced some minor changes. (4) The Industrial Disputes (Amendment) Act, 1952 was enacted in March, 1952 replacing the Industrial Disputes (Amendment) Ordinance, 1951 promulgated on the 5th December, 1951 and the Act removed certain legal defects and widened the powers of the Government to refer the disputes to Boards of Conciliation, Courts of Inquiry or Industrial Tribunals.

Main Provisions of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 as amended up to 1952

The Act provides for setting up of Works Committees with a view to foster the spirit of joint consultation between the employers and workers, to remove the causes of friction in the day-to-day administration of the workshop and to promote measures to secure good relations and amity between the parties. The Act empowers the appropriate Government to constitute Works Committees in every industrial establishment employing 100 workers or more.

The Act gives a new orientation to the conciliation machinery provided therein. The Act makes it compulsory for Government to refer all disputes relating to public utility services for conciliation, but it is optional in case of other disputes. If an agreement is reached in course of conciliation proceedings, it becomes effective from the date of signing or from the date agreed upon and will be binding for such period as may be agreed upon, or if there is no such provision, for a period of six months and thereafter until revoked by two month's notice by either party. Time limits have been prescribed for conclusion of conciliation proceedings with a view to expedition—14 days in case of conciliation by a Conciliation Officer and two months in case of a Board of Conciliation.

The appropriate Government may refer the dispute to an Industrial Tribunal for adjudication, on receipt of the report of the Conciliation Officer or Board of Conciliation. The Act lays down that every member of the Industrial Tribunal must be an independent person and must be a District Judge or qualified for appointment as a High Court Judge and where a Tribunal consists of two or more persons, every member except the Chairman, shall possess such qualifications as may be prescribed. The awards of the Tribunals become binding on the parties on the expiry of 30 days from the date of their publication and where there is no provision for publication, 30 days from the date on which they are made. The period of the operation of the award is one year, but the period can be reduced by the appropriate Government who are also authorised to extend it for a period not exceeding one year at a time subject to a total period not exceeding three years. The award shall also be binding on the parties even after the stipulated period until a period of two months has elapsed from the date on which notice is given by one party of its intention to terminate the award.

The Act prohibits strikes and lock-outs during the pendency of conciliation and adjudication proceedings, of settlements reached in the course of conciliation proceedings and of awards of the Industrial Tribunals enforced by the appropriate Governments.

The Act provides that during the pendency of any proceedings, employers shall neither alter the conditions of service of any worker, nor dismiss or punish him without obtaining the permission of the Conciliation Officer, Board or Tribunal. Workmen aggrieved by an act of contravention can lodge a complaint before the Industrial Tribunal which is empowered to deal with the complaint as if it were a dispute referred to or pending before it.

The Act makes special provision for representation by parties to the dispute. The workers are authorised to be represented by an officer of a registered trade union of which they are members or by an officer of a federation of trade unions to which their trade union is affiliated. Similarly, the employers are authorised to be represented by an officer of the Association of which they are members or an officer of a Federation of Associations of Employers to which their Association is affiliated. Either party can be represented by a legal practitioner if the other party does not raise any objection and if the Tribunal permits it.

The Act empowers the appropriate Government to declare, if public interest or emergency so requires, any of the following industries to be public utility service for a period not exceeding six months—(1) transport (other than railways) for the carriage of passengers or goods by land, water or air; (2) coal; (3) cotton textiles; (4) foodstuffs and (5) iron and steel.

Industrial Disputes (Appellate Tribunal) Act, 1950 (LXVIII of 1950)

The working of the Act revealed the need of a central Appellate Authority to review the decisions of large number of Industrial Tribunals set up by the Central and State Governments and to co-ordinate their activities. With a view to constitute such an authority, the Industrial Disputes (Appellate Tribunal) Act was passed on the 20th May, 1950. The Act applies to the whole of India except the State of Jammu and Kashmir and authorises the Central Government to constitute Labour Appellate Tribunal for hearing appeals from awards or decisions of Industrial Tribunals, Courts, Wage Boards and other statutory bodies set up under Central or State laws for adjudication of industrial disputes. The Appellate Tribunal is to consist of a Chairman and such number of members as may be decided by the Central Government. The Chairman of the Appellate Tribunal is authorised to constitute different Benches of the Appellate Tribunal for exercising its powers and functions.

The principal seat of the Appellate Tribunal is at Calcutta and four Benches of the Tribunal are functioning at Bombay, Calcutta, Lucknow and Madras.

The Central Government, by a notification dated the 1st October, 1951 framed the Industrial Disputes (Appellate Tribunal) Rules, 1951. The Labour Appellate Tribunal framed certain Orders in August, 1951, to regulate its practice and procedure.

There were several complaints about enormous delays in settling labour disputes through Labour Appellate Tribunal and the Central Government decided to abolish the Tribunal and this decision was welcomed by the State Governments and labour unions but opposed by the employers. The Act was repealed by the Industrial Disputes (Amendment and Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1956 (XXXVI of 1956) which came into force from 1st September, 1956 under the Ministry of Labour Notification No. S.R.O. 1935 dated the 28th August, 1956.

Labour Relations Bill, 1950 (Bill No. 6 of 1950)¹

In the light of the experience of the working the Industrial Disputes Act, the Central Government decided to make a radical revision of the law. The Labour Minister introduced the Labour Relations Bill in the Parliament on the 24th January, 1950 to provide for the regulation of the relationship between employers and employees, for the prevention, investigation and settlement of the labour disputes and certain matters incidental thereto.

1 Statement of Objects and Reasons.—The Labour Relations Bill which breaks new ground is the first attempt at providing the country with a comprehensive law on the subject, superseding the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 and similar legislations obtaining in States. Uniformity in the basic law governing labour relations has, in recent times, become imperative, particularly in view of the necessity for the setting up of an All-India Appellate Tribunal with jurisdiction over all Union and State Tribunals.

2. The Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act, 1946, which provides for the framing of standing orders regulating the day-to-day working of an establishment is now a separate enactment, but its provisions have been incorporated in the Bill as they cover matters which are essentially part and parcel of the relations between management and labour. The Bill is extensive in scope and applies to all categories of employees except civil servants, persons employed in the defence forces and domestic servants and to all establishments working with more than ten employees.

3. Three new authorities are envisaged in the Bill, namely, Standing Conciliation Boards, Labour Courts and the Appellate Tribunal. Standing Conciliation Boards and Labour Courts have been tried in certain States with a fair measure of success. The Appellate Tribunal, the setting up of which will be the responsibility of the Union, is a new authority of considerable importance. Lack of uniformity in the awards given by the large number of Tribunals in the country has resulted in divergent, if not conflicting, decisions causing much embarrassment to employers, particularly those with establishments in more than one State, and restlessness and expectancy among employees who find their compeers in a neighbouring district or State much better off than themselves. It will be the responsibility of the Appellate Tribunal to ensure all possible co-ordination and uniformity in the settlement of labour disputes throughout the country. It will be noticed that though a large number of authorities are enumerated in the Act, some are purely optional, some are to be set up only when the necessity arises, and only two, viz., Registering Officers and Conciliation Officers, have of necessity to be appointed from the start.

4. Constitutional and practical difficulties have made it necessary for the Union to assume a wider jurisdiction than in the past. Regulation and control of a number of industries by the Union may necessitate the regulation of labour relations in some of those industries by the Union. Power has been taken in the Bill for that purpose, but the assumption of control by the Union will not be automatic or even immediate and would take place only when a situation arose warranting such a course. Even in that case, the States concerned would be consulted beforehand. Where establishments such as banks, insurance companies, transport services, etc., have branches and activities in more than one State, practical difficulties necessitate the regulation of labour in those employments by the Union.

5. Faith in the efficacy of friendly negotiations between an employer and his employees is the very basis of the Bill. Negotiations must be attempted at an early stage and in a proper atmosphere and not after a strike has already taken place or a Conciliation Officer has been forced to come on the scene. The Bill provides for a notice requiring the other party to start negotiations within seven days. If the party which receives the notice takes advantage of that opportunity (which it must in a public utility service), negotiations

The Bill was a comprehensive measure and sought to repeal (1) Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act, 1946; (2) Industrial Disputes Act, 1947; (3) Industrial Disputes (Banking and Insurance Companies) Act, 1949; (4) Industrial Disputes (Appellate Tribunal) Act, 1950; (5) Bombay Industrial Relations Act, 1946; (6) United Provinces Industrial Disputes Act, 1947; (7) Central Provinces and Berar Industrial Disputes Settlement Act, 1947 and (8) Industrial Disputes (Madras Amendment) Act, 1949.

The Bill was extensive both in scope and character and would apply to all categories of employees except civil servants, persons employed in defence forces and domestic servants and to all establishments working with more than ten employees. The provisions of the Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act, 1946 was incorporated in the Bill as it covered matters essentially part and parcel of the relations between management and labour.

The most important feature of the Bill was the provision for collective bargaining for regulation of labour-management relations. A simple procedure for collective bargaining was adopted in place of less formal procedure for negotiations and conciliation.

Other special features of the Bill were the provisions relating to retrenchment to be effected after prescribed notice and payment of gratuity and go-slow policy must be concluded within 14 days in the case of a public utility service and 7 days in any other case unless those periods are extended by mutual agreement. Where negotiations break down, a 14 days notice is required in public utility services before a strike or lock-out can be declared.

6. Collective bargaining which is the recognised procedure in the West for the regulation of labour-management relations has hitherto not received in this country the attention it deserves. An attempt has been made to introduce a simple procedure for collective bargaining which may be adopted in place of the less formal procedure for negotiations and conciliation. Even that simple procedure may, in the first instance, be suited only to the industrially advanced States. After experience has been gained of the working of collective bargaining, it may be necessary to improve the procedure, but it has been considered advisable not to complicate it by making it too rigid from the very beginning.

7. Where Labour Courts are set up in a State, they will have jurisdiction over all disputes except those mentioned in Schedule II which will continue to remain under the jurisdiction of Labour Tribunals. Where Labour Courts are not set up, all disputes are referable to Labour Tribunals at the discretion of the appropriate Government.

8. Among the other special features of the Bill may be mentioned the provisions relating to retrenchment, go-slow policy and the exercise of control over certain categories of undertakings in certain circumstances. Retrenchments can be effected only after the prescribed notice has been given and gratuity paid. A go-slow policy, whether on the part of employers or of employees, if proved before a Labour Tribunal, will be deemed to be an illegal lock-out or strike and dealt with as such. The power to exercise control over undertakings is restricted to those deemed essential for the maintenance of order and for supplies and services essential to the life of the community and is subject to stringent safeguards.

9. A serious drawback of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 is the fact that the provisions contained in it for the enforcement of settlements and awards are too weak to be effective and that persons entitled to relief find it very difficult to enforce their rights. The Bill seeks to remedy those defects. The penalty for breach of a settlement; collective agreement, order or award has been substantially increased, and amounts due from an employer may be recovered as if they were arrears of land revenue. In suitable cases Government might step in and exercise control over the undertaking. Employees are liable to forfeit their claims to bonus and the employer's share of the provident fund and to be dismissed from service. Trade unions are liable to forfeit their registration and recognition and certified bargaining agents, their certificates.

10. It should be the goal of any progressive labour policy to so influence labour-management relations as to make the withdrawal of State intervention possible. A strong trade union movement which is conscious alike of its rights and responsibilities—one that will stand on its own legs and not lean for ever on a crutch—can alone make industrial peace enduring. It is the aim of the Bill to build up labour-management relations on such sure foundations, and if rights have been tempered with responsibilities, the scales have been held even as between the parties (Gazette of India, 1950, Part V, pp. 52-54).

on the part of the employers or employees, which should be deemed to be an illegal lock-out or strike and dealt with as such.

The Bill authorises the Central Government to regulate and control a number of industries deemed essential to the life of the community and for maintenance of order, subject to stringent safeguards.

The Bill was placed for discussion in the tenth session of the Indian Labour Conference held at Delhi in March, 1950 and was subsequently referred to the Select Committee which suggested a number of modifications relating to strikes, lock-outs, dismissals and retrenchment and submitted the report on the 1st December, 1950. There were several objections to the Bill as overwhelming emphasis was sought to be placed on the compulsory adjudication and judicial machinery at practically every stage of the settlement of a dispute and the machinery was complicated and involved protracted legal proceedings thereby leading to delay in decision. The Bill lapsed with the dissolution of the Parliament.

Industrial Disputes (Amendment) Act, 1953 (XLI of 1953)

There had been a large volume of involuntary unemployment in recent years due to closure of industrial establishments for reasons other than industrial disputes. The provisions regarding "lay-off" was subject of agreement between employers and employees at the thirteenth session of the Standing Labour Committee held at Delhi in July, 1953. The President of India promulgated the Industrial Disputes (Amendment) Ordinance (Ord. V of 1953) on the 24th October, 1953 laying down the conditions under which workers might be laid-off or retrenched. The Ordinance was replaced by the Industrial Disputes (Amendment) Act, 1953 (XLI of 1953).

The Amending Act lays down that no worker who has rendered a year's continuous service or more, may be retrenched without being given one month's notice or wages in lieu thereof as well as compensation for losing his job. The compensation is calculated at the rate of 15 days' average pay for every completed year of service or part thereof, in excess of six months and is applicable to factories and mines only.

Industrial Disputes (Amendment) Act, 1954 (XLVIII of 1954)

The Industrial Committee on Plantation in its fifth meeting held at Calcutta in December, 1954 considered the question of lay-off compensation to the plantation workers and recommended that the provisions of the Industrial Disputes (Amendment) Act of 1953 relating to lay-off should be made applicable to plantation industry.

The Industrial Disputes (Amendment) Act, 1954 (XLVIII of 1954) was passed to give effect to the above recommendation. The Amending Act extends the provisions relating to lay-off and retrenchment to plantation workers with effect from the 1st of April, 1954.

Industrial Disputes (Amendment and Miscellaneous Provisions) Act, 1956 (XXXVI of 1956)

Sri Jagjivan Ram's Labour Relations Bill, 1950 having lapsed and Sri V. V. Giri's proposed Industrial Relations Bill having not received whole-hearted support from different Ministries of the Central and State Governments and employers and labour, the question of enacting suitable legislation on the subject or revision of the legislation was discussed in the meetings of the Joint Consultative Board of Industry and Labour and also by the Planning Commission.

The Central Government introduced the Industrial Disputes (Amendment and Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill, 1955 in the Lok Sabha on the 27th September, 1955 making certain important changes in the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 and the Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act, 1946 and for repeal of the Industrial Disputes (Appellate Tribunal) Act, 1950. The Act was passed by the Lok Sabha on the 24th July, 1956 and received President's assent on the 28th August, 1956. The revised definition of "workman" and application of the Amending Act were brought into force from the 29th August, 1956.

The Act enlarges the definition of the word "workman" covering technical staff and supervisory personnel drawing a salary up to Rs. 500 per month. A new Chapter has been inserted providing that the employer shall not introduce any change in respect of certain specified matters without giving notice to the workman concerned. The employers shall give 21 days' notice of any changes in the conditions of service of workmen mentioned in the Fourth Schedule. The existing provisions of Section 33 are altered so as to provide that where, during the pendency of proceedings, an employer finds it necessary to proceed against any workman in regard to any matter unconnected with the dispute, he may do so in accordance with the standing orders; but where the action taken involves discharge or dismissal, he has to pay one month's wages to the workman and simultaneously file an application for approval before the appropriate authority.

The Act abolishes the Labour Appellate Tribunal and seeks to set up a three-tier adjudication machinery of Labour Courts, Industrial Tribunals and National Tribunals, with jurisdiction to decide disputes pertaining to specified matters. There is no provision for appeal from the decisions of any of these Tribunals.

The Act has added the following five industries (apart from five industries in the original Act) which may be declared to be public utility services—(1) banking; (2) cement; (3) defence establishments; (4) service in hospitals and dispensaries and (5) fire brigade service. The Act will not override any State laws and will not be applicable to proceedings pending before Tribunals before its commencement.

Industrial Disputes (Amendment) Act, 1956 (XLI of 1956)

There was some doubt about the ambiguity regarding quantum of lay-off compensation and also whether retrenchment compensation becomes payable by reason of change of employers. The Industrial Disputes (Amendment) Bill was introduced in the Rajya Sabha on the 23rd March, 1956 to clear up these points and after being passed by the Rajya Sabha, was passed by the Lok Sabha on the 20th August, 1956.

The Amending Act specifies the circumstances under which some compensation beyond the first 45 days of lay-off would be applicable. The Act also makes special provisions relating to workmen employed in undertakings which have been transferred. The Act received assent of the President on the 4th September, 1956.

Amendment of the Act by State Governments

The Madras High Court having declared that section 10 of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 does not empower the Government to refer dispute to an Industrial Tribunal constituted under the Act, the Madras Government introduced a Bill to amend the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, to validate all proceedings taken and awards made in respect of any such reference. The Industrial Disputes (Madras Amendment) Act, 1949 received the assent of the Governor-General on the 10th June, 1949.

The Uttar Pradesh Government amended the Act in October, 1951 to remove certain legal difficulties. The Mysore Government amended the Act in July, 1953 for transferring industrial disputes from one Tribunal to another. The Saurashtra Government amended the Act in December, 1953 in its application to the State with a view to make provisions for registration of voluntary agreements and representative unions.

State Legislations on Industrial Disputes

The following States have enacted separate laws on the subject:

Bombay Trade Disputes Conciliation Act, 1934 provided for appointment of Labour Officers, Special Conciliators and authorised the Government to appoint Commissioner of Labour as the Chief Conciliator. This Act was repealed by the Bombay Industrial Disputes Act, 1938 which provided for an elaborate machinery for promotion of peaceful and amicable settlement of industrial disputes.

Bombay Industrial Relations Act, 1946 (Bom. Act XI of 1947)

The Bombay Industrial Disputes Act of 1938 was repealed and replaced by the Bombay Industrial Relations Act which provides for quicker and more efficient disposal of industrial disputes and gives a greater impetus to labour to organise itself. Some fundamental changes have been introduced by the new Act—(1) creation of a new class of approved unions and maintenance of a list of such approved unions, authorising them to collect subscriptions, hold discussions with the employers for prevention and settlement of industrial disputes, (2) establishment of Labour Courts, which are entirely new in India, to decide cases regarding illegal strikes and lock-outs and also to decide disputes regarding illegal changes in the standing orders or conditions of work, (3) establishment of Joint Committees consisting of equal number of employers' and employees' representatives in various occupations and undertakings in an industry, (4) formation of Wage Boards for standardisation of wages, rationalisation, etc. The Act was amended in 1948 (twice), 1949, 1953, 1955 and 1956.

(2) MADHYA PRADESH

The Central Provinces and Berar Industrial Disputes Settlement Act, 1947 (XXIII of 1947) which was passed in May, 1947, provides for promotion of peaceful settlement of industrial disputes by conciliation and arbitration but is a less comprehensive measure than the Bombay Act. It makes provisions for the constitution of permanent Conciliation Machinery. The Act provides for registration of recognised unions and for compulsory framing and settlement of standing orders. The Act was amended in December, 1947, May, 1951 and November, 1955. The last amendment was undertaken for establishment of Wage Boards to bring it in line with the Bombay Act.

(3) UTTAR PRADESH

The Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 not being entirely suitable to the conditions of Uttar Pradesh, the State Government promulgated two successive Ordinances, viz., United Provinces Industrial Disputes Ordinance on the 14th May, 1947 and the United Provinces Industrial Disputes (Amendment) Ordinance on the 10th June, 1947, pending subsequent enactment of a comprehensive measure.

The United Provinces Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 (Act XXVIII of 1947) was passed in December, 1947 providing for powers to prevent strikes and lock-outs and to settle industrial disputes and for other incidental matters.

The Act retains the existing machinery of Boards of Conciliation and Courts of Inquiry and creates two new institutions—Works Committees and Industrial Tribunals for prevention and settlement of industrial disputes. The Act confers wide powers on Government authorising them to issue orders prohibiting strikes or lock-outs generally or in connection with any industrial dispute and requiring employers and/or workmen to observe such conditions and terms of employment as may be specified in the order.

The Act also lays down penalty for illegal strikes and lock-outs and for instigating or inciting the same and also for breach of settlement or award. The Act was amended in August, 1950 and October, 1953.

INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES ACT, 1947 (XIV OF 1947)

Statement of Objects and Reasons¹

Experience of the working of the Trade Disputes Act, 1929, has revealed that its main defect is that while restraints have been imposed on the rights of strike and lock-out in public utility services, no provision has been made to render the proceedings institutable under the Act for the settlement of an industrial dispute, either by reference to a Board of Conciliation or to a Court of Inquiry conclusive and binding on the parties to the dispute. This defect was overcome during the war by empowering under Rule 81-A of the Defence of India Rules, the Central Government to refer industrial disputes to adjudicators and to enforce their awards. Rule 81-A which was to lapse on the 1st October, 1946, is being kept in force by the Emergency Powers (Continuance) Ordinance, 1946, for a further period of six months, and as industrial unrest, in checking which this rule have proved useful, is gaining momentum due to stress of post-war industrial re-adjustment, the need of permanent legislation in replacement of this rule, is self-evident. This Bill embodies the essential principles of Rule 81-A which have proved generally acceptable to both employers and workmen, retaining intact, for the most part, the provisions of the Trade Disputes Act, 1929.

2. The two new institutions for the prevention and settlement of industrial disputes provided for in the Bill are the Works Committees consisting of representatives of employers and workmen, and Industrial Tribunals consisting of one or more members possessing qualifications, ordinarily required for appointments as Judges of a High Court. Power has been given to appropriate Governments to require Works Committees to be constituted in every industrial establishment employing 100 workmen, or more and their duties will be to remove causes of friction between the employer and workmen in the day to day working of the establishment and to promote measures for securing amity and good relationship between them. Industrial peace will be most enduring where it is founded on voluntary settlement, and it is hoped that the Works Committees will render recourse to the remaining machinery provided for in the Bill for the settlement of disputes infrequent. A reference to an Industrial Tribunal will lie where both parties to any industrial dispute apply for such reference and also where the appropriate Government considers it expedient so to do. An award of a Tribunal may be enforced either wholly or in part by the appropriate Government for a period not exceeding one year. The power to refer disputes to Industrial Tribunals and enforce their awards is an essential corollary to the obligation that lies on the Government to secure conclusive determination of the disputes with a view to redressing the legitimate grievances of the parties thereto, such obligation arising from the imposition of restraints on the rights of strike and lock-out, which must remain inviolate, except where considerations of public interest override such rights.

3. The Bill also seeks to re-orient the administration of the conciliation machinery provided in the Trade Disputes Act. Conciliation will be compulsory in all disputes in public utility services and optional in the case of other industrial establishments. With a view to expedite conciliation proceedings time limits have been prescribed for conclusion thereof—14 days in the case of conciliation officers and two months in the case of Board of Conciliation, from the date of notice of strike. A settlement arrived at in the course of conciliation proceedings will be binding for such period as may be agreed upon by the parties and where no period has been agreed upon, for a period of one year; and will continue to be binding until revoked by three months' notice by either party to the dispute.

4. Another important new feature of the Bill relates to the prohibition of strikes and lock-outs during the pendency of conciliation and adjudication proceedings, of settlements reached in the course of conciliation proceedings and of awards of Industrial Tribunals declared binding by the appropriate Government. The underlying argument is that where a dispute has been referred to conciliation or adjudication a strike or lock-out in furtherance thereof, is both unnecessary and inexpedient. Where on the date of reference to conciliation or adjudication, a strike or lock-out is already in existence, power is given to the appropriate Government to prohibit its continuance lest the chances of settlement or speedy determination of the dispute should be jeopardized.

5. The Bill also empowers the appropriate Government to declare, if public interest or emergency so requires, by notification in the Official Gazette, any industry to be a public utility service, for such period, if any, as may be specified in the notification.

INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES (AMENDMENT) ACT, 1952 (XVIII OF 1952)²

Statement of Objects and Reasons³

The Industrial Disputes (Amendment) Bill, 1952 seeks to make certain changes in the law relating to the adjudication of industrial disputes which experience has shown are urgently required in order to remove doubts and to reduce litigation. The question whether a person holding shares in an establishment can be deemed to be "independent" for the purpose of appointment on a Tribunal called upon to adjudicate on a dispute affecting that establishment was recently raised and was held to be not free from doubts. The Bill seeks to remove the disqualification, if any, attaching to the holding of shares. Occasionally when disputes arise in the large majority of units of an industry, it becomes necessary to include in the adjudication even the few units which show no evidence of the existence of actual disputes but which, if left out, are sure to raise disputes of their own. Power is sought to be taken for such inclusion.

INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES (AMENDMENT) ACT, 1953 (XLIII OF 1953)

Statement of Objects and Reasons⁴

The Industrial Disputes (Amendment) Bill, 1953 seeks to provide for payment of compensation to workmen in the event of their lay-off or retrenchment. The provisions included in the Bill are not new and were discussed at various tripartite meetings. Those relating to lay-off are based on an agreement entered into between the representatives of employers and workers who attended the 13th session of the Standing Labour Committee. In regard to retrenchment, the Bill provides that a workman who has been in continuous employment for not less than one year under an employer shall not be retrenched until he has been given one month's notice in writing or one month's wages in lieu of such notice and also gratuity calculated at 15 days' average pay for every completed year of service or any part thereof in excess of six months. A similar provision was included in the Labour Relations Bill, 1950 which has since lapsed. Though compensation on the lines provided for in the Bill is given by all progressive employers; it is felt that a common standard should be set for all employers.

INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES (AMENDMENT) ACT, 1954 (XLVIII OF 1954)

Statement of Objects and Reasons⁵

The Industrial Disputes (Amendment) Act, 1953, provides for payment of lay-off compensation to workers in factories covered by the Factories Act, 1948, and in mines coming under the Mines Act, 1952. Workers in plantations have, however, not been included in the Act. In view of the insistent demand of plantation workers, the question of extending the provisions relating to lay-off benefits to them was placed before the meeting of the Industrial Committee on Plantations held at Calcutta in January, 1954. The Committee recommended that the provisions of the Industrial Disputes (Amendment) Act, 1953, relating to lay-off should be applied to the plantation industry with effect from the 1st April, 1954 subject to the condition that none of the provisions of the Act derogated from the effect of any statutory notifications issued by Governments or of any agreements or contracts entered into between the parties requiring the provision by employers of a minimum number of days of work or wages or compensation to workers. The Bill is intended to give statutory effect to the above recommendation.

² The Industrial Disputes Act was also amended by the Industrial Disputes (Banking and Insurance Companies) Act, 1949 (54 of 1949) and the Industrial Disputes (Amendment and Temporary Provisions) Act, 1951 (40 of 1951). Statement of Objects and Reasons of these Amending Acts have been printed at page 1404 and page 1406.

INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES (AMENDMENT AND MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS) ACT, 1956 (XXXVI of 1956)

Statement of Objects and Reasons⁶

The Industrial Disputes (Amendment and Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill, 1955, seeks to make certain long needed changes in the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, and the Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act, 1946, and to repeal the Industrial Disputes (Appellate Tribunal) Act, 1950.

2. The present definition of 'workman' in section 2(s) of the Industrial Disputes Act has led to uncertainty, particularly in the case of technical and supervisory personnel. It is, therefore, proposed to enlarge the definition to cover supervisory personnel, whose emoluments do not exceed Rs. 500 per mensem, and also the technical personnel.

3. There has been a persistent demand that notice should be given whenever it is proposed to make any change in the conditions of service of workmen. Therefore, a new Chapter, namely, Chapter IIA is proposed to be inserted to provide that the employer shall not introduce any change in respect of certain specified matters without giving to the workmen concerned 21 days' notice of his intention to do so.

4. The existing provisions of section 33 of the Act prohibit during the pendency of any conciliation proceeding or proceeding before a Tribunal any change being made in the conditions of service of, or any action being taken against, the workmen concerned in the dispute except with the express written permission of the authority concerned. The number of applications for such permission is frequently large and their disposal takes time. Employers have complained that they are therefore prevented from taking action even in obvious cases of misconduct and indiscipline unconnected with the dispute till long after the offence has been committed. It is proposed to alter the existing provisions so as to provide that, where, during the pendency of proceedings an employer finds it necessary to proceed against any workman in regard to any matter unconnected with the dispute, he may do so in accordance with the Standing Order applicable to the workman, but where the action taken involves discharge or dismissal, he will have to pay the workman one month's wages and simultaneously file an application before the authority, before which the proceeding is pending, for its approval of the action taken. Protection on the lines of the existing provisions will continue to be available to all workmen in regard to any matter or misconduct connected with the dispute. A limited number of representatives of the workers will, however, be given protection in all matters whether connected with the dispute or otherwise.

5. There is a large volume of criticism that appeals filed before the Appellate Tribunal take a long time for disposal and involve a great deal of expenditure which the workers cannot afford. It is proposed to repeal the Industrial Disputes (Appellate Tribunal) Act, 1950, and at the same time, to substitute the present system of tribunals by a three-tier system of original tribunals, manned by personnel of appropriate qualifications. References to the National Tribunals will be made by the Central Government and they will cover disputes which involve questions of national importance or which are of such a nature that establishments situated in more than one State are likely to be interested in, or affected by, the disputes.

6. Provision is also made for voluntary reference of disputes to arbitration by the parties themselves by written agreement and for the enforcement of agreements between employers and workmen reached otherwise than in the course of conciliation.

7. Opportunity has been taken to carry out certain essential amendments to the Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act, 1946. It is proposed to empower both the Certifying Officer and the Appellate Authority to take into account the fairness or reasonableness of the standing orders before they are certified. Under the present law, only the employer can take steps to modify the existing standing orders. A similar right is being provided in the Bill for workmen. Provision has also been made for the resolution of differences that may arise between the parties as to the application and interpretation of standing orders. In case of any such difference, the parties can approach a Labour Court without the intervention of the appropriate Government.

INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES (AMENDMENT) ACT, 1956 (XLI of 1956)

Statement of Objects and Reasons⁷

Doubt has been raised whether retrenchment compensation under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, becomes payable by reason merely of the fact that there has been a change of employers, even if the service of the workman is continued without interruption and the terms and conditions of his service remain unaltered. This has created difficulty in the transfer, reconstitution and amalgamation of companies and it is proposed to make the intention clear by amending section 25F of the Act.

⁶ Gazette of India Extraordinary, 1955, Part II—Sec. 2, pp. 430-432.

2. Questions have also been raised whether a workman who is laid-off for more than forty-five days continuously is entitled to lay-off compensation for any period beyond the first forty-five days. Opportunity has been taken to remove the ambiguity by specifying the circumstances under which such compensation beyond the first forty-five days would be admissible to a workman.

(ii) if he does not present himself for work at the establishment at the appointed time during normal working hours at least once a day;

(c) notice in the prescribed manner is served on the appropriate Government.

⁷⁹[25FF. Special provision relating to workmen employed in undertakings which are transferred.—Notwithstanding anything contained in section 25F, no workman shall be entitled to compensation under that section by reason merely of the fact that there has been a change of employers in any case where the ownership or management of the undertaking in which he is employed is transferred, whether by agreement or by operation of law, from one employer to another:

Provided that—

Procedure for retrenchment.—Where any workman in an industrial establishment, who is a citizen of India, is to be retrenched and he belongs to a particular category of workmen in that establishment, in the absence of any agreement between the employer and the workman in this behalf, the employer shall ordinarily retrench the workman who was the last person to be employed in that category, unless for reasons to be recorded the employer retrenches any other workman.

25H. Re-employment of retrenched workmen.—Where any workmen are retrenched, and the employer proposes to take into his employ any persons, he Provided that nothing contained in this Act shall have effect to derogate from any right which a workman has under ⁸¹[the Minimum Wages Act, 1948 (XI of 1948) or any notification or order issued thereunder or] any award for the time being in operation or any contract with the employer.

(2) For the removal of doubts, it is hereby declared that nothing contained in this Chapter shall be deemed to affect the provisions of any other law for the time being in force in any State in so far as that law provides for the settlement of industrial disputes, but the rights and liabilities of employers and workmen in so far as they relate to lay-off and retrenchment shall be determined in accordance with the provisions of this Chapter.]

INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES (BANKING AND INSURANCE COMPANIES) ACT, 1949 (LIV OF 1949)

Statement of Objects and Reasons*

Prior to the promulgation on the 30th April, 1949 of the Industrial Disputes (Banking and Insurance Companies) Ordinance, disputes in banks and insurance companies were the responsibility of Provincial Governments. Provincial Governments were the "appropriate authority" under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947. Besides this Central enactment, three Provinces, viz., Bombay, the United Provinces and the Central Provinces and Berar, have provincial labour relations enactments of their own under which also control over disputes in banks and insurance companies rested with the Provincial Governments. A bank with branches in several Provinces had, therefore, to deal with a number of Provincial Governments and a number of agencies including Tribunals set up by them for the settlement of disputes arising in its establishments. It was only to be expected that under such an arrangement it would be difficult for an organisation with country-wide establishments to maintain any principle of uniformity in the matter of wages, allowances and other terms and conditions of employment of its staff. While the question of undertaking the necessary legislation for removing this drawback was under consideration, a major dispute affecting the staff of a large number of banks in the United Provinces and having branches in various Provinces forced the issue and called for the intervention of the Central Government. There was every indication of similar disputes arising in other Provinces also. It was, therefore, considered urgently necessary for the Centre to intervene. The Industrial Disputes (Banking and Insurance Companies) Ordinance, 1949, was accordingly promulgated on the 30th April, 1949. According to that Ordinance the responsibility for dealing with disputes in banks and insurance companies having branches in more than one Province passed over to the Central Government. As the Ordinance was to expire on the 30th October, 1949 it had to be replaced by a second Ordinance. It is now proposed to replace that Ordinance by an Act. The provisions contained in the Bill will eventually be included in the comprehensive legislation relating to the revision of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, now under the consideration of the Government.

INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES (AMENDMENT AND TEMPORARY PROVISIONS) ACT, 1951 (XL OF 1951)

Statement of Objects and Reasons¹

Certain disputes between banks having branches in more than one State and their employees were adjudicated upon by an Industrial Tribunal called the All-India Industrial Tribunal (Bank Disputes) last year. The awards of the Tribunal have recently been declared void by the Supreme Court on the ground of defects in the constitution of the

Tribunal. The disputes have, therefore, to be resolved afresh. The main object of the Bill is to ensure that pending such settlement, employees continue to get whatever scales of pay or rates of allowances were allowed to them immediately prior to the declaration of the awards as void. Provision has also been made for enabling the appointment of persons other than judges as members of multi-member tribunals and, in particular, the appointment of a banking expert on tribunals adjudicating upon disputes in banks. There is also a clause which extends the provision now applicable only to public utility services to other classes of establishments, prescribing a period of two months as the normal time allowed for conciliation proceedings before a Board. Other clauses are largely consequential.

INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES (AMENDMENT AND TEMPORARY PROVISIONS) ACT, 1951 (XL OF 1951)¹

An Act further to amend the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, and to make certain temporary provisions relating to pay and allowances of certain workmen.

[Tsth June, EFLE.]

Be it enacted by Parliament as follows:—

1. Short title.—This Act may be called the Industrial Disputes (Amendment and Temporary Provisions) Act, 1951.

2. Interpretation.—All words and expressions used in this Act and defined in the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 (XIV of 1947) shall have the meanings assigned to them in that Act.

² 3 to 6.—Amendments to the Industrial Disputes Act XIV of 1947.

7. Temporary provisions relating to scales of pay, etc., of workmen in banking companies.—(1) No employer in relation to any banking company carrying on business in any Part A State or the State of Delhi, Ajmer or Coorg or the Andaman and Nicobar Islands shall save in accordance with the terms of any settlement arrived at, or any award made, under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 (XIV of 1947),—

(a) alter, to the prejudice of any workman employed in such banking company, the scale of pay or rate of allowances according to which he has been paid, or would, if he had been continuously employed during the month of March, 1951, have been paid, in respect of any monthly, weekly or other period immediately before the 1st day of April, 1951; or

(b) recover from any such workman any amount already paid to him whether as pay or allowances (in accordance with any scales of pay or rates of allowances which were applied to him at any time after the 1st day of February, 1950) on the ground that the workman was not legally entitled to such scales of pay or rates of allowances.

Explanation.—For the purposes of this section, ‘allowances’ mean any dearness allowance, house-rent allowance, halting allowance, washing allowance, fuel allowance and officiating allowance (so long as the workman holds the officiating appointment) and includes any special pay or allowance paid to a workman on the ground of special qualifications, skill or responsibility attaching to, or required in respect of, his work or office and also includes the special pay or allowance given to—

(i) graduates, (ii) holders of banking diplomas like C. A. I. I. B. and C. A. I. B., (iii) comptists; (iv) stenographers; (v) cashiers; (vi) supervisors; (vii) sub-accountants; (viii) clerks-in-charge; (ix) departmental-in-charge; (x) head clerks, and (xi) certain categories of subordinate staff.

² The amendments have been incorporated in the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947.

(2) For the removal of doubts, it is hereby declared that notwithstanding anything contained in any law it shall be lawful to make such retrospective adjustment in relation to scales of pay and rates of allowances referred to in sub-section (1) as may be necessary in order to give effect to the terms of any settlement arrived at or award made under the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947 (XIV of 1947).

8. Recovery of money due from an employer.—Any money due from an employer under the provisions of section 7 may be recovered in the same manner as an arrear of land revenue or as a public demand by the appropriate Government either on its own motion or an application made to it by the persons entitled to such money.

INDUSTRIAL DISPUTES (BANKING COMPANIES) DECISION ACT, 1955 (XLI OF 1955)

Statement of Objects and Reasons¹

In June, 1949, the Central Government referred for adjudication a number of disputes between the banking companies in the country and their employees to an All-India Industrial Tribunal known as the Sen Tribunal. The Tribunal gave its award in July, 1950, but it was set aside by the Supreme Court in April, 1951. The matter was subsequently referred to another All-India Industrial Tribunal known as Sastry Tribunal in January, 1952. That Tribunal gave its award in April, 1953. On appeal, the Labour Appellate Tribunal made certain alterations in the award. The decision of the Labour Appellate Tribunal was modified by Government in certain respects in August, 1954. In making the modifications, Government was necessarily guided by the material available at the time. It was considered desirable to collect more complete data and to have the matter investigated further in the light of those data. Government, therefore, appointed a single-member Commission of Inquiry known as the Bank Award Commission, consisting of a Judge of the Bombay High Court. The Commission was requested to conduct a fact-finding enquiry and make recommendations as regards the further modifications, if any, necessary in the decision of the Labour Appellate Tribunal as adapted by the Government's Modification Order. The Commission submitted its recommendations towards the end of July, 1955. Government have accepted in full the recommendations of the Commission on the substantive terms of the award. This Bill is designed to give effect to the recommendations of the Commission. Considering that the dispute has been pending since 1949 and that it has taken so long to finalise the terms and conditions of service of the employees in question, it is considered desirable that those terms and conditions should remain in operation for at least five years instead of the normal period of one year provided for in the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947. The Bill accordingly makes the necessary provision in this regard.

2. It has also been considered advisable to provide for a suitable machinery to resolve points of difference or doubt between the parties as regards the interpretation or application of the terms of the award. Provision in this regard has been made in the Bill.

MISCELLANEOUS LEGISLATION

WORKING JOURNALISTS (CONDITIONS OF SERVICE) AND MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS ACT, 1955 (XLV OF 1955)

Statement of Objects and Reasons¹

The Press Commission which was constituted by Government to inquire, among other things, into the conditions of employment of working journalists, have made certain recommendations for improvement and regulation of such service conditions by means of legislation. These recommendations cover minimum period of notice, gratuity, provident fund, settlement of industrial disputes, leave with pay, hours of work and minimum wages. All these aspects are covered in the Bill which generally follows the lines indicated by the Press Commission; the determination of minimum wages has, however, for various reasons, been left to a Board to be constituted for this purpose.

2. The Commission also suggested the application of the Industrial Employment (Standing Orders) Act, 1946, and the Employees' Provident Funds Act, 1952, to the industry, and such application is also provided for in the Bill in respect of establishments exceeding a certain minimum size.

3. In order to provide a longer period of notice in certain cases of retrenchment, necessary legislative provision in respect of the application of Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, has been included in the Bill.

4. A transitional clause is also included to cover cases of retrenchment which had occurred after the Press Commission signed their report, but before the application of the Industrial Disputes Act, 1947, to working journalists.

18. Penalty.—(1) If any employer contravenes the provisions of section 6, he shall be punishable with fine which may extend to two hundred rupees.

(2) No court inferior to that of a presidency magistrate or a magistrate of the first class shall try any offence punishable under this section.

TERRITORIAL ARMY ACT, 1948 (LVI OF 1948) (EXTRACTS)

An Act to provide for the constitution of a Territorial Army.

[10th September, 1948]

Whereas it is expedient to provide for the constitution of a Territorial Army:

It is hereby enacted as follows:—

1. Short title, extent and application.—(1) This Act may be called the Territorial Army Act, 1948.

(2) It extends to the whole of India¹ * * * and applies to all classes of persons in the Territorial Army, wherever they may be.

* * * * *

2[7A. Re-instatement in civil employ of persons required to perform military service.—

(1) It shall be the duty of every employer by whom a person who is required to, per- from military service under section 7 was employed to re-instate him in his employment on the termination of the military service in an occupation and under conditions not less favourable to him than those which would have been applicable to him had his employment not been so interrupted:

Provided that if the employer refuses to re-instate such person or denies his liability to re-instate such person, or if for any reason re-instatement of such person is represented by the employer to be impracticable, either party may refer the matter to the prescribed authority and that authority shall, after considering all matters which may be put before it and after making such further inquiry into the matter as may be prescribed, pass an order—

(a) exempting the employer from the provisions of this section, or

(b) requiring him to re-employ such person on such terms as he thinks suitable, or

(c) requiring him to pay such person by way of compensation for failure or inability to re-employ a sum not exceeding an amount equal to six months' remuneration at the rate at which his last remuneration was payable to him by the employer.

(2) If any employer fails to obey the order of any such authority as is referred to in the proviso to sub-section (1), he shall be punishable with fine which may extend to one thousand rupees, and the court by which an employer is convicted under this section shall order him (if he has not already been so required by the said authority) to pay to the person whom he has failed to re-employ a sum equal to six months' remuneration at the rate at which his last remuneration was payable to him by the employer, and any amount so required to be paid either by the said authority or by the court shall be recoverable as if it were a fine imposed by such court.

(3) In any proceeding under this section it shall be a defence for an employer to prove that the person formerly employed did not apply to the employer for re-instatement within a period of two months from the termination of his military service.

¹ Certain words omitted by Part B State (Laws) Act, 1951 (3 of 1951), 5 and 3 Sch.

2. Although many employers have treated their employees fairly, even generously, in this matter, experience has shown that there are many others who are not willing to act likewise. It has therefore become expedient to amend the Territorial Army Act to impose a statutory liability on the employers to afford necessary protection in civil employment to members of the Territorial Army and the proposed legislation seeks to achieve this purpose (Gazette of India, 1952, Part II—Sec. 2, p. 72.)

(4) The duty imposed by sub-section (1) upon an employer to re-instate in his employment a person such as is described in that sub-section shall attach to an employer who, before such person is actually required to perform military service under section 7, terminates his employment in circumstances such as to indicate an intention to evade the duty imposed by that sub-section, and such intention shall be presumed until the contrary is proved if the termination takes place after the issue of orders requiring him to perform military service under this Act.

7B. Preservation of certain rights of persons required to perform military service.—When any person required to perform military service under section 7 has any rights under any provident fund or superannuation fund or other scheme for the benefit of employees maintained in connection with the employment he relinquishes, he shall continue, so long as he is engaged in military service and if he is re-instated, until such re-instatement under the provisions of this Act, to have in respect of such fund or scheme such rights as may be prescribed.]

14. Power to make rules.—(1) The Central Government may make rules to carry out the purposes of this Act.

(2) In particular, and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing power, such rules may—

(ddd) define the rights under section 7B;]

Provided that if the employer refuses to re-instate such person or denies his liability to re-instate such person, or if for any reason the re-instatement of such person is represented by the employer to be impracticable, either party may refer the matter to the prescribed authority and that authority shall, after considering all matters which may be put before him and after making such further inquiry into the matter as may be prescribed, pass an order—(a) exempting the employer from the provisions of this section, or (b) requiring him to re-employ such person on such terms as that authority thinks suitable, or (c) requiring him to pay to such person by way of compensation for failure or inability to re-employ a sum not exceeding an amount equal to six months' remuneration at the rate at which his last remuneration was payable to him by the employer.

(3) If any employer refuses or fails to pay to any such member the difference in pay and allowances as provided in sub-section (2), such difference in pay and allowances may, on application by the member to the prescribed authority, be recovered from the employer in such manner as may be prescribed.

INDUSTRIES (DEVELOPMENT AND REGULATION) ACT, 1951 (LXV OF 1951)

Statement of Objects and Reasons

The object of this Bill is to provide the Central Government with the means of implementing their industrial policy which was announced in their Resolution No. I (3)-44 (13) 48 dated 6th April 1948 and approved by the Central Legislature. The Bill brings under Central control the development and regulation of a number of important industries the activities of which affect the country as a whole and the development of which must be governed by economic factors of all India import. The planning of future development on sound and balanced lines is sought to be secured by the licensing of all new undertakings by the Central Government. The Bill confers on Government power to make rules for the registration of existing undertakings, for regulating the production and development of the industries in the Schedule and for consultation with Provincial Governments on these matters. Provision has also been made for the constitution of a Central Advisory Council, prior consultation with which will be obligatory before the Central Government takes certain measures such as the revocation of a licence or taking over the control and management of any industrial concern.¹

INDUSTRIES (DEVELOPMENT AND REGULATION) AMENDMENT ACT, 1953 (XXVI OF 1953)

Statement of Objects and Reasons²

The Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, 1951, came into force on the 8th May, 1952. In the course of the working of this Act, certain practical difficulties have come to light.

2. Some of those difficulties are:—

(a) the period allowed under section 10 of the Act for the registration of undertakings has not been found to be adequate in actual practice, and therefore requires to be extended;

(b) while powers are available in the existing Act to revoke licences in certain cases, no such powers are available for the revocation of registration where it is necessary to do so;

(c) the provisions relating to licensing are not complete inasmuch as they do not apply to—(i) industrial undertakings which though required to be registered are not registered within the time limited for the purpose; (ii) industrial undertakings which, though not registrable at the commencement of the Act, become registrable subsequently by reason of the definitions in the Act becoming applicable thereto; (iii) industrial undertakings proposing to change their location; (iv) industrial undertakings proposing to take up the manufacture of goods of new brands (and types) within the same scheduled industry or of goods pertaining to any other scheduled industry, without any additional plant and machinery or factory buildings;

(d) the explanation of the term "substantial expansion" is not free from ambiguity;

(e) Government cannot take over the management of any industrial undertaking, even in a situation calling for emergent action, without first issuing directions to it and waiting to see whether or not they are obeyed;

(f) the law, as it stands, does not deal in any detail with the consequences of Government taking over the management of an undertaking;

(g) certain items in the First Schedule are not sufficiently descriptive so as to include all important sections of the industries concerned.

The object of the Bill is mainly to remove such difficulties.

3. At present, the power to control prices and distribution of various goods under this Act is confined to industrial undertakings registered or licensed under the Act. In all other cases, it is necessary to have recourse to powers derived from the Essential Supplies (Temporary Powers) Act, 1946 and the Supply and Prices of Goods Act, 1950. Both these enactments have a limited period of life. It is proposed to add a chapter taking power to control the distribution and price of goods produced in scheduled industries and of similar goods even though they may be of imported origin.

4. Opportunity is also taken to remove a doubt which may arise by reason of the phraseology of section 4 which says that nothing in the Act shall apply to industrial undertakings of which the capital invested does not exceed rupees one lakh. This provision is liable to be misconstrued to mean that even the declaration contained in section 2 is inapplicable to such undertakings. It is also difficult to define "capital invested" suitably for the purpose of the Act. It is, therefore, proposed to omit section 4, and wherever necessary, exemptions would be granted under the new section 28 to any undertakings or scheduled industries. Incidentally, six more important industries, namely, the silk, the artificial silk, the dye-stuff, the soap, the plywood and the ferromanganese industries are being added to the Schedule.

(2) Any notified order issued under sub-section (1) shall have effect for such period not exceeding five years as may be specified in the order:

Provided that the Central Government, if it is of opinion that it is expedient in public interest so to do, may direct that any such notified order shall continue to have effect after the expiry of the period of five years aforesaid for such further period as may be specified in the direction and where any such direction is issued, a copy thereof shall be laid, as soon as may be, before both Houses of Parliament.

18D. INDUSTRIES (DEVELOPMENT AND REGULATION) AMENDMENT ACT, 1956

Statement of Objects and Reasons¹

The Industries (Development and Regulation) Act, 1951, which has brought under the control of the Union 42 industries by reason of the declaration contained in section 2 of that Act, enables the Government to secure the development of those industries in conformity with its industrial policy. The Schedule is now proposed to be amended in order to bring within the control of the Union the following new industries which are of all-India importance:—

(1) Ferro-alloys and special steels; (2) Lignite; (3) Television sets; (4) Teleprinters; (5) Electrical furnaces; (6) X-Ray equipment; (7) Abrasives and grinding wheels; (8) Earth-moving machinery, such as bull-dozer, dumpers, shovels, loaders, bucket wheel excavators, road rollers, etc.; (9) Typewriters and Calculating machines; (10) Air-conditioners and refrigerators; (11) Medical and surgical appliances such as surgical instruments, sterilisers, incubators, etc.; (12) Plastics moulding industries; (13) Industrial instruments; (14) Fine chemicals including photographic chemicals; (15) Synthetic resins and plastics; (16) Paints, varnishes and enamels; (17) Synthetic rubber; (18) Staple fibre; (19) Explosives, including gun-powder and safety fuses; (20) Insecticides, fungicides, weedicides, etc.; (21) Textile auxiliaries; (22) Textile accessories; (23) Textile Processing; (24) Photographic raw films and printing paper; (25) Pulp—wood pulp, mechanical, technical, including dissolving pulp; (26) Fermentation industries; (27) Food processing industries; (28) Hardboard, chipboard and strawboard; (29) Asbestos cement, insulating boards, gypsum boards, wall boards, etc.; (30) Matches and (31) Cigarettes.

Opportunity is taken to revise the Schedule as now proposed to be amended so that the industries are grouped together on a scientific basis.

2. A few minor difficulties which have been brought to light in the working of the Act are sought to be removed by the remaining amendments.

The first amendment in clause 2 provides for the licensing of industrial undertakings the registration of which has been revoked on the ground of the closure of the undertaking or the discontinuance of production of certain articles, etc. [Section 13(1)(b) at present applies only to cases where registration is revoked on the ground that it had been obtained by misrepresentation as to an essential fact]. The second amendment in this clause covers licensed undertakings which seek to effect substantial expansion.

The amendment in clause 5 provides for the licensing of undertakings which by reason of an exemption granted under section 29B did not require to be registered or licensed under the Act at the time of the commencement of the Act or at the time of their establishment or when they commenced manufacturing or producing new articles or when they sought to effect substantial expansions, as the case may be, and which are now to be licensed by reason of the cancellation of the exemption.

The amendments in clauses 3, 4 and 6 are consequential.

APPENDICES

THE PHILADELPHIA CHARTER¹

Declaration concerning the Aims and Purposes of International Labour Conference.

I

The Conference reaffirms the fundamental principles on which the Organisation is based and, in particular, that:

- (a) labour is not a commodity;
- (b) freedom of expression and of association are essential to sustained progress;
- (c) poverty anywhere constitutes a danger to prosperity everywhere;
- (d) the war against want requires to be carried on with unrelenting vigour within each nation and by continuous and concerted international effort in which the representatives of workers and employers, enjoying equal status with those of Governments, join with them in free discussion and democratic decision with a view to the promotion of the common welfare.

II

Believing that experience has fully demonstrated the truth of the statement in the Constitution of the International Labour Organisation that lasting peace can be established only if it is based on social justice, the Conference affirms that;

- (a) all human beings, irrespective of race, creed or sex, have the right to pursue both their material well-being and their spiritual development in conditions of freedom and dignity of economic security and equal opportunity;
- (b) the attainment of the conditions in which this shall be possible must constitute the central aim of national and international policy;
- (c) all national and international policies and measures, in particular those of an economic and financial character, should be judged in this light and accepted only in so far as they may be held to promote and not to hinder the achievement of this fundamental objective;
- (d) it is a responsibility of the International Labour Organisation to examine and consider all international economic and financial policies and measures in the light of this fundamental objective;
- (e) in discharging the tasks entrusted to it the International Labour Organisation, having considered all relevant economic and financial factors may include in its decisions and recommendations any provisions which it considers appropriate.

III

The Conference recognises the solemn obligation of the International Labour Organisation to further among the nations of the world programmes which will achieve:

- (a) full employment and the raising of standards of living;
- (b) the employment of workers in the occupations in which they can have the satisfaction of giving the fullest measure of their skill and attainments and make their greatest contribution to the common well-being;
- (c) the provision, as a means to the attainment of this end and under adequate guarantees for all concerned, of facilities for training and the transfer of labour, including migration for employment and settlement;
- (d) policies in regard to wages and earnings, hours and other conditions of work calculated to ensure a just share of the fruits of progress to all, and a minimum living wage to all employed and in need of such protection;
- (e) the effective recognition of the right of collective bargaining, the co-operation of management and labour in the continuous improvement of productive efficiency, and the collaboration of workers and employers in the preparation and application of social and economic measures;
- (f) the extension of social security measures to provide a basic income to all in need of such protection and comprehensive medical care;
- (g) adequate protection for the life and health of workers in all occupations;
- (h) provision for child welfare and maternity protection;

¹ The General Conference of the International Labour Organisation in its Twenty-sixth Session held in Philadelphia on the 10th May 1944, has adopted the above Declaration of its aims and purposes and of the principles which should inspire the policy of its members.

- (i) the provision of adequate nutrition, housing and facilities for recreation and culture;
- (j) the assurance of equality of educational and vocational opportunity.

IV

Confident that the fuller and broader utilisation of the world's productive resources necessary for the achievement of the objectives set forth in this Declaration can be secured by effective international and national action, including measures to expand production and consumption, to avoid severe economic fluctuations, to promote the economic and social advancement of the less developed regions of the world. To assure greater stability in world prices of primary products, and to promote a high and steady volume of international trade, the Conference pledges the full co-operation of the International Labour Organisation with such international bodies as may be entrusted with a share of the responsibility for this great task and for the promotion of the health, education and well-being of all peoples.

V

The Conference affirms that the principles set forth in this Declaration are, fully applicable to all peoples everywhere and that, while the manner of their application must be determined with due regard to the stage of social and economic development reached by each people, their progressive application to peoples who are still dependent, as well as to those who have already achieved self-government, is a matter of concern to the whole civilised world.

RESOLUTION ON INDUSTRIAL TRUCE¹

This Conference considers that the increase in industrial production which is so vital to the economy of the country cannot be achieved without the fullest co-operation between labour and management and stable and friendly relations between them. The employer must recognise the proper role of labour in industry and the need to secure for labour fair wages and working conditions; labour for its part must give equal recognition to its duty in contributing to the increase of the national income without which a permanent rise in the general standard of living cannot be achieved. Mutual discussion of all problems common to both and a determination to settle all disputes without recourse to interruption in or slowing down of production should be the common aim of employers and labour. The system of remuneration to capital as well as labour must be so devised that while in the interests of the consumers and the primary producers excessive profits should be prevented by suitable measures of taxation and otherwise, both will share the product of their common effort after making provision for payment of fair wages to labour, a fair return on capital employed in the industry and reasonable reserves for the maintenance and expansion of the undertaking.

For attaining these objectives, this Conference recommends:

(a) that the fullest use should be made of statutory and other machinery for the resolution of industrial disputes in a just and peaceful manner; where it does not exist, it should be created without delay. Such machinery should as far as possible be uniform throughout India.

(b) that the establishment of machinery, Central, Regional and Functional, for the study and determination of fair wages and conditions of labour, and fair remuneration for capital, and methods for the association of labour in all matters concerning industrial production, such as the formation of Central, Regional and Unit Production Committees.

¹ A Tripartite Conference to discuss some urgent problems relating to industrial development in India and to bring industrial peace, was convened by the Industry and Supply Minister, Government of India in December 1947 and this Resolution was unanimously adopted by the representatives of Governments, employers and labour.

(c) that the constitution in each industrial undertaking of Works Committees representing management and duly elected representatives of labour for the settlement of any dispute which may arise from day to day.

(d) that, as a first step towards improving the standard of living of workers, immediate attention should be devoted to the problem of housing of industrial labour; the cost of such housing should be shared in suitable proportions between the Government, employers and labour, the share of labour being given in the shape of a reasonable rent.

The principles enunciated above having been accepted, this Conference calls upon labour and management to agree to maintain industrial peace and to avert lock-outs, strikes or slowing down of production during the next three years.

This Conference invites labour and management to assist Government to secure, promote and guarantee such agreements between the parties as will usher in a period of contented and orderly advancement towards a co-operative Commonwealth.

RESOLUTION REGARDING SOCIALIST PATTERN OF SOCIETY¹

This House having considered the economic situation in India and the Policy of the Government in relation thereto, is of the opinion that—

1. The policy of Government is in harmony with the policy statement of the 6th April, 1948;
2. The objective of our economic policy should be a socialistic pattern of society; and
3. Towards this end the tempo of economic activity in general and industrial development in particular should be stepped up to the maximum possible extent.

INDUSTRIAL POLICY RESOLUTION, 1956²

No. 91/CF/48 dated the 30th April, 1956—The Government of India set out in their Resolution dated the 6th April, 1948, the policy which they proposed to pursue in the industrial field. The Resolution emphasised the importance to the economy of securing a continuous increase in production and its equitable distribution, and pointed out that the State must play a progressively active role in the development of industries. It laid down that besides arms and ammunition, atomic energy and railway transport, which would be the monopoly of the Central Government, the State would be exclusively responsible for the establishment of new undertakings in six basic industries—except where, in the national interest, the State itself found it necessary to secure the co-operation of private enterprise. The rest of the industrial field was left open to private enterprise though it was made clear that the State would also progressively participate in this field.

2. Eight years have passed since this declaration on Industrial Policy. These eight years have witnessed many important changes and developments in India. The Constitution of India has been enacted, guaranteeing certain Fundamental Rights and enunciating Directive Principles of State Policy. Planning has proceeded on an organised basis, and the First Five Year Plan has recently been completed. Parliament has accepted the socialist pattern of society as the objective of social and economic policy. These important developments necessitate a fresh statement of industrial policy, more particularly as the Second Five Year Plan will soon be placed before the country. This policy must be governed by the principles laid down in the Constitution, the objective of socialism, and the experience gained during these years.

3. The Constitution of India, in its preamble, has declared that it aims at securing for all its citizens—

“JUSTICE, social, economic and political;

LIBERTY of thought, expression, belief, faith and worship;

EQUALITY of status and of opportunity; and to promote among them all FRATERNITY assuring the dignity of the individual and the unity of the Nation.”

In its Directive Principles of State Policy, it is stated that—

“The State shall strive to promote the welfare of the people by securing and protecting as effectively as it may a social order in which justice, social, economic and political, shall inform all the institutions of the national life.”

² The Resolution was published in the Gazette of India Extraordinary, Part I—Section 1, dated the 30th April, 1956 at pages 137-144.

Further that—

“The State shall, in particular, direct its policy towards securing—(a) that the citizens, men and women equally, have the right to an adequate means of livelihood; (b) that the ownership and control of the material resources of the community are so distributed as best to subserve the common good; (c) that the operation of the economic system does not result in the concentration of wealth and means of production to the common detriment; (d) that there is equal pay for equal work for both men and women; (e) that the health and strength of workers, men and women, and the tender age of children are not abused and that citizens are not forced by economic necessity to enter avocations unsuited to their age or strength; (f) that childhood and youth are protected against exploitation and against moral and material abandonment.”

4. These basic and general principles were given a more precise direction when Parliament accepted in December, 1954, the socialist pattern of society as the objective of social and economic policy. Industrial policy, as other policies, must therefore be governed by these principles and directions.

5. In order to realise this objective, it is essential to accelerate the rate of economic growth and to speed up industrialisation and, in particular, to develop heavy industries and machine making industries, to expand the public sector, and to build up a large and growing co-operative sector. These provide the economic foundations for increasing opportunities for gainful employment and improving living standards and working conditions for the mass of the people. Equally, it is urgent, to reduce disparities in income and wealth which exist to-day, to prevent private monopolies and the concentration of economic power in different fields in the hands of small numbers of individuals. Accordingly, the State will progressively assume a predominant and direct responsibility for setting up new industrial undertakings and for developing transport facilities. It will also undertake State trading on an increasing scale. At the same time, as an agency for planned national development, in the context of the country's expanding economy, the private sector will have the opportunity to develop and expand. The principle of co-operation should be applied wherever possible and a steadily increasing proportion of the activities of the private sector developed along co-operative lines.

6. The adoption of the socialist pattern of society as the national objective, as well as the need for planned and rapid development, require that all industries of basic and strategic importance, or in the nature of public utility services, should be in the public sector. Other industries which are essential and require investment on a scale which only the State, in present circumstances, could provide, have also to be in the public sector. (The State has therefore to assume direct responsibility for the future development of industries over a wider area. Nevertheless, there are limiting factors which make it necessary at this stage for the State to define the field in which it will undertake sole responsibility for further development, and to make a selection of industries in the development of which it will play a dominant role. After considering all aspects of the problem, in consultation with the Planning Commission, the Government of India have decided to classify industries into three categories, having regard to the part which the State would play in each of them. These categories will inevitably overlap to some extent and too great a rigidity might defeat the purpose in view. But the basic principles and objectives have always to be kept in view and the general directions hereafter referred to followed. It should also be remembered that it is always open to the State to undertake any type of industrial production.

7. In the first category will be industries the future development of which will be the exclusive responsibility of the State. The second category will consist of industries, which will be progressively State-owned and in which the State will therefore generally take the initiative in establishing new undertakings, but in which private enterprise will also be expected to supplement the effort of the State. The third category will include all the remaining industries, and their future development will, in general, be left to the initiative and enterprise of the private sector.

8. Industries in the first category have been listed in Schedule A of this Resolution. All new units in these industries, save where their establishment in the private sector has already been approved, will be set up only by the State. This does not preclude the expansion of the existing privately owned units, or the possibility of the State securing the co-operation of private enterprise in the establishment of new units when the national interests so require. Railways and air transport, arms and ammunition and atomic energy will, however, be developed as Central Government monopolies. Whenever co-operation with private enterprise is necessary, the State will ensure, either through majority participation in the capital or otherwise, that it has the requisite powers to guide the policy and control the operations of the undertaking.

9. Industries in the second category will be those listed in Schedule B. With a view to accelerating their future development, the State will increasingly establish new undertakings in these industries. At the same time private enterprise will also have the opportunity to develop in this field, either on its own or with State participation.

10. All the remaining industries will fall in the third category, and it is expected that their development will be undertaken ordinarily through the initiative and enterprise of the private sector, though it will be open to the State to start any industry even in this category. It will be the policy of the State to facilitate and encourage the development of these industries in the private sector, in accordance with the programmes formulated in successive Five Year Plans, by ensuring the development of transport, power and other services, and by appropriate fiscal and other measures. The State will continue to foster institutions to provide financial aid to these industries, and special assistance will be given to enterprises organised on co-operative lines for industrial and agricultural purposes. In suitable cases, the State may also grant financial assistance to the private sector. Such assistance, especially when the amount involved is substantial, will preferably be in the form of participation in equity capital, though it may also be in part in the form of debenture capital.

11. Industrial undertakings in the private sector have necessarily to fit into the framework of the social and economic policy of the State and will be subject to control and regulation in terms of the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act and other relevant legislation. The Government of India, however, recognise that it would, in general, be desirable to allow such undertakings to develop with as much freedom as possible, consistent with the targets and objectives of the national plan. When there exist in the same industry both privately and publicly owned units, it would continue to be the policy of the State to give fair and non-discriminatory treatment to both of them.

12. The division of industries into separate categories does not imply that they are being placed in water-tight compartments. Inevitably, there will not only be an area of overlapping but also a great deal of dovetailing between industries in the private and the public sectors. It will be open to the State to start any industry not included in Schedule A and Schedule B when the needs of planning so require or there are other important reasons for it. In appropriate cases, privately owned units may be permitted to produce an item falling within Schedule A for meeting their own requirements or as by-products. There will be ordinarily no bar to small privately owned units undertaking production, such as the making of launches and other light-craft, generation of power for local needs and small scale mining. Further, heavy industries in the public sector may obtain some of their requirements of lighter components from the private sector, while the private sector in turn would rely for many of its needs on the public sector. The same principle would apply with even greater force to the relationship between large scale and small scale industries.

13. The Government of India would, in this context, stress the role of cottage and village and small scale industries in the development of the national economy. In relation to some of the problems that need urgent solutions, they offer some distinct advantages. They provide immediate large scale employment; they offer a method of ensuring a more equitable distribution of the national income and they facilitate an effective mobilisation of resources of capital and skill which might otherwise remain unutilised. Some of the problems that unplanned urbanisation tends to create will be avoided by the establishment of small centres of industrial production all over the country.

14. The State has been following a policy of supporting cottage and village and small scale industries by restricting the volume of production in the large scale sector, by differential taxation, or by direct subsidies. While such measures will continue to be taken, whenever necessary, the aim of the State policy will be to ensure that the decentralised sector acquires sufficient vitality to be self-supporting and its development is integrated with that of large scale industry. The State will, therefore, concentrate on measures designed to improve the competitive strength of the small scale producer. For this it is essential that the technique of production should be constantly improved and modernised, the pace of transformation being regulated so as to avoid, as far as possible, technological unemployment. Lack of technical and financial assistance, of suitable working accommodation and inadequacy of facilities for repair and maintenance are among the serious handicaps of small scale producers. A start has been made with the establishment of industrial estates and rural community workshops to make good these deficiencies. The extension of rural electrification and the availability of power at prices which the workers can afford will also be of considerable help. Many of the activities relating to small scale production will be greatly helped by the organisation of industrial co-operatives. Such co-operatives should be encouraged in every way and the State should give constant attention to the development of cottage and village and small scale industry.

15. In order that industrialisation may benefit the economy of the country as a whole, it is important that disparities in levels of development between different regions should be progressively reduced. The lack of industries in different parts of the country is very often determined by factors such as the availability of the necessary raw materials or other natural resources. A concentration of industries in certain areas has also been due to the ready availability of power, water supply and transport facilities which have been developed there. It is one of the aims of national planning to ensure that these facilities are steadily made available to areas which are at present lagging behind industrially or where there is greater need for providing opportunities for employment, provided the location is otherwise suitable. Only by securing a balanced and co-ordinated development of the industrial and the agricultural economy in each region, can the entire country attain higher standards of living.

16. This programme of industrial development will make large demands on the country's resources of technical and managerial personnel. To meet these rapidly growing needs for the expansion of the public sector and for the development of village and small scale industries, proper managerial and technical cadres in the public services are being established. Steps are also being taken to meet shortages at supervisory levels, to organise apprenticeship schemes of training on a large scale both in public and in private enterprises, and to extend training facilities in business management in universities and other institutions.

17. It is necessary that proper amenities and incentives should be provided for all those engaged in industry. The living and working conditions of workers should be improved and their standard of efficiency raised. The maintenance of industrial peace is one of the prime requisites of industrial progress. In a socialist democracy labour is a partner in the common task of development and should participate in it with enthusiasm. Some laws governing industrial relations have been enacted and a broad common approach has developed with the growing recognition of the obligations of both management and labour. There should be joint consultation and workers and technicians should, wherever possible, be associated progressively in management. Enterprises in the public sector have to set an example in this respect.

18. With the growing participation of the State in industry and trade, the manner in which these activities should be conducted and managed assumes considerable importance. Speedy decisions and a willingness to assume responsibility are essential if these enterprises are to succeed. For this, wherever possible, there should be decentralisation of authority and their management should be along business lines. It is to be expected that public enterprises will augment the revenues of the State and provide resources for further development in fresh fields. But such enterprises may sometimes incur losses. Public enterprises have to be judged by their total results and in their working they should have the largest possible measure of freedom.

19. The Industrial Policy Resolution of 1948 dealt with a number of other subjects which have since been covered by suitable legislation or by authoritative statements of policy. The division of responsibility between the Central Government and the State Governments in regard to industries has been set out in the Industries (Development and Regulation) Act. The Prime Minister, in his statement in Parliament on the 6th April 1949, has enunciated the policy of the State in regard to foreign capital. It is, therefore, not necessary to deal with these subjects in this resolution.

20. The Government of India trust that this restatement of their Industrial Policy will receive the support of all sections of the people and promote the rapid industrialisation of the country.

AIMS & OBJECTS OF INTERNATIONAL & NATIONAL TRADE UNIONS¹

Aims and Methods of World Federation of Trade Unions

The World Federation of Trade Unions exists to improve the living and working conditions of the people of all lands to unite them in pursuit of the objectives sought by all freedom-loving peoples as set forth in the Declarations of the London World Trade Union Conference in February, 1945.

These aims and objects can only be fully attained by the establishment of a World Order in which all the resources of the world will be utilized for the benefit of all its peoples, the vast majority of whom are workers by hand and brain whose protection and whose progress depend upon the union of all their organized forces nationally and internationally.

The World Federation of Trade Unions therefore proclaims its prime purposes to be:

(a) To organize and unite within its ranks the trade unions of the whole world, irrespective of considerations of race, nationality, religion, or political opinion; (b) To assist, wherever necessary, the workers in countries socially or industrially less developed, in setting up their trade unions; (c) To carry on the struggle for the extermination of all fascist forms of government and every manifestation of fascism, under whatever form it operates and by whatever name it may be known; (d) To combat war and the causes of war work for a stable and enduring peace;

By giving full support to the establishment of a powerful and effective international organization armed with all necessary power to prevent aggression and maintain peace;

By supporting the widest possible international co-operation in the social economic spheres and measures for the industrial development and full utilization of the resources of the undeveloped countries;

By carrying on a struggle against reaction and for the full exercise of the democratic rights and liberties of all peoples;

¹ There are two International Trade Unions Organisations, viz., World Federation of Trade Unions constituted in September 1945 with headquarters in Paris and International Confederation of Free Trade Unions established in December 1949 with headquarters in Brussels.

At present there are four Central Trade Union Organisations in India—All India Trade Union Congress, Indian National Trade Union Congress, Hind Mazdoor Sabha and United Trades Union Congress established in 1920, 1947, 1949 and 1950 and their membership in 1953 being 2,10,914; 9,19,258; 3,73,459 and 1,29,242 respectively.

(e) To represent the interest of world labour in all international agencies whose responsibility will be to solve the problems of world organization, resting upon agreements or conventions concluded between the United Nations, and in such other international bodies as may be decided upon by the World Federation of Trade Unions; (f) To organize the common struggle of trade unions of all countries;

Against all encroachments on the economic and social rights of the workers and on democratic liberties.

For the satisfaction of the need of the workers for security of full employment;

For the progressive improvement of wages, hours and working and living conditions of the workers;

For full and adequate social security to protect workers and their families against the hazards of unemployment, sickness, accident and old age;

For the adoption of all other measures furthering the social and economic well being of the workers;

(g) To plan and organise the education of trade union members on the question of international labour unity and to awaken them to a consciousness of their individual responsibility for the realization of trade union purposes and aims.

In order to achieve these ends, the World Federation of Trade Unions bases its work on the following principles: (1) Full democracy within the trade unions of all countries and close collaboration among them; (2) Permanent contact with affiliated Trade Union Organizations, fraternal support and assistance to them in their work; (3) Systematic exchange of information and experience in trade union work with the object of strengthening the solidarity of the international labour movement; (4) Co-ordination of action by the workers' organizations for the realization of their international aims and decisions; (5) Protection of the interests of the workers in emigration and immigration; (6) Using every available means of making known and explaining the purposes for which the World Federation of Trade Unions is organized, the objectives which it seeks, its programme for the achievement of these objectives and its decisions on specific issues.

RAILWAY PERMANENT NEGOTIATING MACHINERY

The Railway Board decided that a permanent machinery should be set up for maintaining contact with labour resolving disputes and differences which may arise between them and the Administration with effect from 1st January, 1952.

The machinery is envisaged in 3 tiers; one at the railway level, the recognized Unions having access to district/divisional officers and subsequently to officers at the headquarters including the General Manager; at the next tier, matters not settled at railway level will be taken up by the respective Federations with the Railway Board; and at the third tier, in cases in which agreement is not reached between the Federation and the Railway Board, and the matters are of sufficient importance, reference will be made to an ad hoc Railway Tribunal composed of representatives of the Railway Administration and labour presided over by a neutral Chairman.

The following detailed procedure is laid down for the working of the machinery referred to above:—

(i) At the district or divisional level, the District or Divisional Officers should meet the branches of the recognised Unions which may be established in the districts or divisions at least once in two months and oftener if necessary. Each workshop will be considered as a district. The particular branches which should meet the District or Divisional Officers as prescribed above should be agreed upon between the General Manager and the Union. The detailed procedure of arranging these meetings should be agreed upon with the Union, but this should include a provision that the branch should supply in sufficient time before the meeting the subjects which it proposes to raise at the meeting with memoranda setting out its point of view. This would enable the District or Divisional Officer to examine the questions and be prepared to take part in a useful discussion.

(ii) At the Railway Headquarters, the General Manager or the Assistant Deputy General Manager in charge of staff will meet the Unions at least once a quarter and oftener if necessary.

(iii) All disciplinary matters and subjects like promotion, transfer, etc., of individual members of the staff which do not involve any general principle will be excluded from the scope of the discussions at all these levels, except at the discretion of the Officer concerned. Where, however, Unions have been given certain privileges in these matters, these will not ordinarily be curtailed. If, in an integrated unit, there is disparity between the existing privileges in this matter and agreement cannot be reached with the Union on a uniform application of some procedure, the matter should be referred to the Railway Board for further instructions. Pending the receipt of these instructions, the general rule set out above should be followed.

(iv) At the district and railway levels, subjects will comprise those which are within the powers of the officers concerned.

(v) Questions concerning pay scales, allowances, etc., will only be discussed between the Federations and the Railway Board and not at lower levels.

(vi) At the Centre, negotiations will be between the Railway Board and the two Federations and for this purpose, there will be quarterly meetings between the Railway Board and the Federations.

(vii) When a matter which is raised for discussion at the district level is not settled by agreement, it may be raised at the Railway level for further negotiation. Similarly, a matter not settled at the railway level may be brought up by the Federations to the Railway Board for discussion.

(viii) All subjects brought up for discussion at the various levels should be disposed of as expeditiously as possible.

(ix) If, after discussions between the Railway Board and the Federations, agreement is not reached between the two sides on any matters of importance, such matters may be referred to an ad hoc Railway Tribunal which will be set up for dealing with them at the Centre. This Tribunal will consist of an equal number of representatives of railway labour and the Railway Administration with a neutral Chairman. The Tribunal will be enabled to make such investigations as they deem necessary before they give their decision. The detailed procedure which the Tribunal should adopt for conducting its proceedings and submitting its decisions has not yet been drawn up; this will appropriately be dealt with when the Tribunal is set up for the first time.

(x) It would be open to Government to accept, reject or modify the decision of the Tribunal and where the matters in dispute affect the workers under Ministries other than the Railway Ministry, those Ministries will be consulted as to—

(a) whether they have any objection to the disputes being referred to the Railway Tribunal; or (b) whether they would like the dispute to be referred to an ad hoc Commission on which they will also be represented.

(xi) On matters which have been settled by agreement or in which Government ultimately accept the decision of the Tribunal, it will not be open to the Federations to raise the same issues again for a period of two years. In those cases in which Government have rejected or modified the decision of the Tribunal, the issue may be raised at the end of one year.

COLLECTIVE AGREEMENTS¹

AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE AHMEDABAD MILLOWNERS' ASSOCIATION AND AHMEDABAD TEXTILE LABOUR ASSOCIATION*

WHEREAS the Ahmedabad Millowners' Association, Ahmedabad, representing its local member mills and the Textile Labour Association, Ahmedabad, a Representative Union under the Bombay Industrial Relations Act, 1946, for the local area of Ahmedabad have decided that all future industrial disputes between the local member mills of the Ahmedabad Millowners' Association and the Textile Labour Association should be settled without going to the Court by mutual negotiations and in case no settlement is possible by mutual negotiations, then by arbitration.

Now, therefore, it is hereby agreed between the Ahmedabad Millowners' Association, Ahmedabad and the Textile Labour Association, Ahmedabad, as under:—

1. That all disputes connected with an Industrial matter as defined in Section 3(18) of the Bombay Industrial Relations Act, 1946 that may arise in future between the local

¹ I. L. O. Recommendations No. 91 and 92 regarding Collective Agreements and Voluntary Conciliation and Arbitration was adopted in 1951. But since 1920, in India in Ahmedabad cotton mill industry, a novel technique of labour-management relations by means of mutual negotiation and voluntary arbitration, was initiated at the instance of Mahatma Gandhi. A Collective Agreement was subsequently executed in July 1952 for settlement of all disputes by voluntary arbitration, which was renewed in July 1955 when a new Bonus Agreement was also executed.

The above Collective Agreement and Bonus Agreement along with some other important Collective Agreements have been reproduced with the permission of the authorities concerned. Tata Supplemental Agreement of August 1956 is an outstanding agreement as it embodies, for the first time in India, closer association of employees with management. It may be noted here that Bata Collective Agreement was first executed in November, 1948 which was subsequently renewed in July, 1951 and February 1955.

This Agreement has been registered as Submission under Section 66(1) of the Bombay Industrial Relations Act, 1946.

member mills of the Ahmedabad Millowners' Association and the Textile Labour Association and between the Ahmedabad Millowners' Association and the Textile Labour Association, which are not settled by mutual negotiations, shall be referred for arbitration to a Board of Arbitration to be set up for the purpose as provided hereinafter.

2A. That two Panels of Arbitrators shall be constituted, one by each Association, consisting of such number of persons as may be nominated from time to time by each of the two Associations.

2B. That a Panel of Umpires shall be constituted consisting of not more than five and not less than two independent persons to be jointly nominated by both the Associations. In case the Panel of Umpires does not start functioning at the end of a period of three months from the date of this Submission, this Submission will not be inoperative on that ground and the Submission will continue to be operative unless any of the parties decides to revoke it by a proper notice as provided in clause 15 of this Submission, after the completion of period of three months as specified in this clause.

3. That whenever an industrial dispute is to be referred by any party for arbitration under the terms of this Submission, each party to the dispute shall nominate its Arbitrator from its own Panel of Arbitrators referred to in Clause 2A above and the two Arbitrators thus nominated shall form a Bench which shall be termed the Board of Arbitration. The Board of Arbitration thus formed, before starting the arbitration proceedings, shall select an Umpire out of the Panel of the Umpires constituted under Clause 2B above, but in case the Panel of Umpires is not formed or is not functioning, for any reason, shall appoint any other person as Umpire to whom, in case of difference of opinion between the two Arbitrators, it shall refer their individual decisions in writing for giving his Award.

4. That the Board of Arbitration may appoint, if deemed necessary, one or more Assessors to assist it.

5. That the Board of Arbitration shall hold its proceedings on such day and at such time as would be convenient to it and to the parties and shall decide the dispute or disputes referred to it, after such enquiry as it may deem necessary. The Board may ask the parties to submit written statements and may also require them to give evidence oral or otherwise and may further require them to produce before it any documents pertaining to the dispute.

6. That a dispute regarding Bonus shall not be entertained under this Submission but shall be settled as per terms and conditions provided in the Agreement regarding Bonus.

7. That neither the Board of Arbitration nor the Umpire shall enunciate or decide issues other than those specifically referred to it or him, as the case may be, for arbitration.

8. That no party shall be represented in any arbitration proceedings by a professional legal practitioner, but the parties may be assisted by their own technical staff during such proceedings.

9. That every dispute submitted to the Board of Arbitration shall be decided as expeditiously as possible, but in no case, a dispute shall remain undecided by the Board of Arbitration for more than six weeks calculated from the date of registration of the Submission of the dispute to the Board, unless the parties extend the period by mutual consent.

10. That the Award of the Board of Arbitration shall be in writing and shall be final and binding on both the parties. In case there would be no agreed Award of the Board, the matter shall be referred to the Umpire as provided in Clause 3 hereinbefore and the decision of the Umpire shall be in writing and shall be final and binding on the parties to the dispute.

11. That the Umpire, before giving his Award, may, if he deems necessary, require the parties to submit written statements or hear the parties in person for clarification of any points pertaining to the dispute, but it shall not be open to the parties to submit any new evidence to the Umpire.

12. That the Award of the Board of Arbitration and of the Umpire shall be registered under the provisions of the Bombay Industrial Relations Act, 1946 to make it binding on the parties.

13. That the arbitration proceedings shall generally be held at the office of the Ahmedabad Millowners' Association, but in special cases or for the convenience of the Arbitrators or the Umpire, they may be held at any other place in the city of Ahmedabad, as may be decided by the Arbitrators or by the Umpire.

Provided that if desired by the Umpire, the proceedings may also be held outside Ahmedabad.

14. That after the registration of this Submission, neither the Ahmedabad Millowners' Association nor any of its local member mills nor the Textile Labour Association shall take recourse to any legal proceedings in any Court under the Bombay Industrial Relations Act, 1946, in any industrial matter, unless the Board of Arbitration considers that in view of any provisions of the Bombay Industrial Relations Act, 1946, it is not competent to it to decide the dispute in which case, the parties may proceed under the provisions of law.

15. That this Submission shall be in force up to the 31st December 1957 but it may be revoked earlier by either the Ahmedabad Millowners' Association or the Textile Labour Association by giving six months' notice.

BONUS AGREEMENT BETWEEN AHMEDABAD TEXTILE LABOUR ASSOCIATION AND AHMEDABAD MILLOWNERS' ASSOCIATION

WHEREAS the Textile Labour Association, Ahmedabad, a Representative Union for the local area of Ahmedabad under the Bombay Industrial Relations Act, 1946, has given a notice in Form "L" dated the 24th June 1955 to the Ahmedabad Millowners' Association, Ahmedabad, representing its local member mills, desiring a change that certain definite principles, procedure and method should be decided by both the Associations for adoption in future for a period of five years from 1953 to 1957, both inclusive, for grant of Bonus to the employees of the Cotton Textile Mills of Ahmedabad which are members of the Ahmedabad Millowners' Association AND

WHEREAS the Ahmedabad Millowners' Association and the Textile Labour Association, without renouncing the general principles enunciated in decisions and Awards of the Arbitration Boards, the Industrial Court, the Labour Appellate Tribunal and the Supreme Court in respect of Bonus or the rights and privileges created thereunder but only with a view to creating goodwill among workers and for the purpose of maintaining peace in the Industry, have decided to arrive at a mutual arrangement in the matter of the demand of the Textile Labour Association as contained in its aforesaid notice in Form "L",

Now, therefore, it is agreed between the Ahmedabad Millowners' Association, on behalf of its local member mills, and the Textile Labour Association, a representative union, as under:—

1. That this Agreement shall apply to Bonus claims in respect of years 1953, 1954, 1955, 1956 and 1957 in case of each individual member mill. Such claims shall be considered on basis of the result of working of the concern during the year as disclosed in the published balance-sheet and profit and loss a/c for the year (1) ending 31-12-1953, 31-12-1954, 31-12-1955, 31-12-1956 and 31-12-1957 in case of mills whose accounting year begins on 1st January, (2) ending 31-3-1954, 31-3-1955, 31-3-1956, 31-3-1957 and 31-3-1958 in case of mills whose accounting year begins on 1st April, (3) ending 30-6-1953, 30-6-1954, 30-6-1955, 30-6-1956 and 30-6-1957 in case of mills whose accounting year begins on 1st July and (4) ending 30-9-1953, 30-9-1954, 30-9-1955, 30-9-1956 and 30-9-1957 in case of mills whose accounting year begins on 1st October.

This Agreement shall remain in force for a period of five years and shall apply to Bonus claims in respect of the five years, viz. years 1953, 1954, 1955, 1956 and 1957 and notwithstanding both the parties to this Agreement getting their right for termination of the Agreement after a period of one year under provision of Section 116(3) of the Bombay Industrial Relations Act, 1946, both the parties agree that they will not exercise their right of termination of this Agreement, since, as this agreement makes provision of "set-off" and "set-on" for a period of five years, it is necessary that it should remain operative for that period.

2. That the claim of the employees for Bonus would only arise if there should be available surplus of profit after making provision for all the prior charges including a fair return on paid-up capital and on reserves employed as working capital as per the Formula laid down by the Labour Appellate Tribunal in its Full Bench decision* in

* See 1952 L.A.C. 433=1950 L.L.J. 1247.

Appeals Nos. 1 and 5 of 1950 (Millowners' Association, Bombay vs. the Rashtriya Mill Mazdoor Sangh, Bombay), i.e.,

(a) Prior charges, viz., (i) Statutory Depreciation and the Development Rebate; (ii) Taxes; (iii) Reserve for Rehabilitation, Replacement and Modernisation of Block as calculated by the Industrial Court (Basic year 1947), and

(b) A Fair Return (i) at 6% on paid-up capital in cash or otherwise including Bonus Shares; (ii) at 2% on Reserves employed as Working Capital.

(1) For the purpose of this Formula, the amount of the total gross profits of the mill for the year shall be the amount of profits as disclosed in published Balance-Sheet of the Company, without making provision for depreciation and for Bonus but after deducting from it, the amount of extraneous income (like interests from investments, rent from property) which is unrelated to the efforts of the workers.

(2) If in any year, the amount of Statutory Depreciation and Development Rebate will be higher than the amount of Reserve for Rehabilitation, the full amount of Statutory Depreciation and Development Rebate shall be adopted as a prior charge and no extra provision shall be made for Rehabilitation in that year.

3. That a mill which has an available surplus of profits after providing all prior charges, etc., on basis of the Full Bench Formula, as described above in clause 2 of this Agreement, shall pay to its employees bonus out of the available surplus, which bonus in no case shall be less than an amount equivalent to 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year or shall exceed an amount equivalent to 25% of the total basic wages earned during the year.

(i) Provided that if in respect of a particular year, a mill has an available surplus of profit as determined according to the Full Bench Formula, as described hereinbefore in clause 2, which is adequate for granting Bonus at a higher quantum than the ceiling of 25% of basic wages earned during the year as fixed above and it pays the maximum Bonus viz. 25% of basic wages earned during the year under the provisions of this Agreement, such mill will be deemed to have set aside a part of the residue of available profits after grant of maximum Bonus (i.e. 25% of basic wages earned during the year), not exceeding an amount equivalent to 25% of the basic wages earned during the year as a 'reserve' for Bonus for purpose of 'set-on' (adjustment) in subsequent years, provided, however, that the aggregate amount of available surplus thus deemed to have been set aside for purpose of 'set-on' (adjustment) shall not at any time exceed an amount equivalent to 25% of basic wages earned during the year.

The amount of available surplus of profits thus deemed to have been set aside for purpose of 'set-on' (adjustment) will be utilised for making up the deficit, if in any subsequent year the available surplus of profit of a mill calculated according to the Full Bench Formula described hereinbefore in clause 2, will not be adequate to pay Bonus as provided under this Agreement.

The setting aside of a part of available surplus of profit provided under this clause is only for notional calculation for purpose of bonus and has nothing to do with the actual appropriations and allocations made in the Balance-Sheet of the Company.

(ii) Provided further that in case of a mill whose available surplus of profit in a particular year, as calculated under the Full Bench Formula is adequate to grant Bonus at a rate lower than the ceiling (i.e. 25% of basic wages earned during the year) fixed under the Agreement, the quantum of Bonus will be fixed in such a manner that there will remain with the mill, at least a minimum amount of Rs. 10,000/- after providing all prior charges including taxes and after grant of Bonus to the employees. The amount, as indicated hereinbefore set aside and left with the mill under the provisions of this clause shall not be required to be utilised for 'set-on' (adjustment) purpose i.e. for distribution of Bonus in any subsequent year or for making up deficit in the maximum Bonus (i.e. 25% of basic wages earned during the year) in any such year.

(iii) Provided further that if in respect of any year, a mill has available surplus of profits which is adequate to pay bonus at a rate lower than the minimum rate (i.e. 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year) fixed under this Agreement and it is required to pay bonus at the minimum rate (i.e. 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year) under the provision of this Agreement, it shall be entitled to set-off the excess amount thus paid by it to make up the minimum bonus (i.e. 4.8% of the basic wages earned during the year) against the amount of bonus that would be payable in a subsequent year or years in the manner following:

1. If in the subsequent year, the available surplus of profits of this mill as calculated under the Full Bench Formula as described hereinbefore in clause 2 is adequate to grant bonus at the maximum rate of 25% of basic wages earned during the year, the mill will first take out of the amount thus payable as bonus, the excess amount paid by it as bonus in the previous year to make up the minimum bonus (i.e. 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year) and will then distribute the remaining amount (25% of basic wages earned during the year less the excess amount) as bonus.

2. If in the subsequent year, the available surplus of profits of this mill as calculated under the Full Bench Formula described hereinbefore in Clause 2 is adequate to grant bonus at a rate lower than the maximum rate (i.e. 25% of basic wages earned during the year), the mill (a) will first set aside out of the available surplus after providing all prior charges including taxes at least an amount of Rs. 10,000/- and (b) then out of the balance of available surplus of profits, it will further take out the excess amount paid by it as bonus in previous year to make up the minimum bonus (i.e. 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year) and (c) then it will distribute the remaining amount of available surplus of profit as bonus.

The provision for setting aside at least a minimum amount of Rs. 10,000/- out of the available surplus of profits for the year by mills whose available surplus of profit calculated according to the Full Bench Formula described hereinbefore in clause 2 is adequate to pay bonus at a quantum lower than the maximum (i.e. 25% of basic wages earned during the year) fixed under this Agreement, is made on ad hoc basis and the actual apportionment of the available surplus of profits between the mill and its employees will be decided on merits of the case of each individual mill on the principle laid down by the Labour Appellate Tribunal that there is no justification for granting the entire surplus profits as bonus.

4. That (i) a mill whose profit is not adequate to provide for all prior charges, etc., as per the Full Bench Formula, as described in clause 2, or (ii) a mill which has made loss, though totally exempt from liability to pay Bonus under the general principles governing Bonus enunciated by the Labour Appellate Tribunal in its Full Bench decision in appeals Nos. 1 and 5 of 1950 (Millowners' Association, Bombay vs. The Rashtriya Mill Mazdoor Sangh, Bombay) and the decision of the Supreme Court in Civil Appeal No. 135 of 1951 (Muir Mills Ltd., Kanpur vs. Suti Mill Mazdoor Union, Kanpur and the State of U. P.), will, as a special case, for creating goodwill among its workers and for continuing peace in the industry but without creating a precedent, pay to its employees a minimum bonus equivalent to 4.8% of the basic wages earned by them during the year.

Provided that such mill shall be entitled to 'set-off' (adjust the amount thus paid by it as minimum Bonus (i.e. 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year) against the amount of bonus that would be payable in the subsequent year or years under the provisions of this Agreement in the manner following.

The mill will first deduct from the amount of bonus that would be payable in the subsequent year under the terms of the Agreement, the amount of minimum Bonus (i.e. 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year) paid by it in previous years and then out of the residue of the surplus profits thus arrived at, it will pay bonus under the provisions of this Agreement.

5. That for the proper and correct application of the principle of 'set-off' (adjustment) and 'set-on' (adjustment) adopted for the purpose of grant of minimum and maximum bonus in this agreement, a set of illustrations is given hereunder for guidance. (a) The term "Full Bench Formula" used in the following illustrations refers to the "Full Bench Formula" described in clause 2 of this Agreement. (b) It is understood that except in respect of the minimum rate, all figures of percentages in the following illustrations are rounded off for facility of calculation but in case of calculations of quantum of bonus of individual mills the actual percentages will be applied. (c) It is further understood that the expressions "reserve for bonus", "set aside as reserve for bonus" and the like used in the following illustrations do not in any way signify that there will be any actual appropriation of balance-sheet profit under this head. The expressions are used solely for the purpose of explaining the principle of 'set-on' (adjustment) and signify only a notional carry forward. (d) In the following illustrations, the amount for purpose of 'set-off' (adjustment) is shown in form of a certain percentage of basic wages earned during the year. In practice, however, the amount of minimum bonus (i.e. 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year) that will be determined to be payable from actual calculations under the provisions of this Agreement, will be permitted to be 'set-off' (adjusted) by the mill in the subsequent year.

ILLUSTRATION I.

In 1953, Mill "A" has a surplus of profit as calculated according to the Full Bench Formula, which is adequate to grant Bonus equivalent to 83% of basic wages earned during the year. This mill will pay maximum Bonus equivalent to 25% of the basic wages earned during the year under the Agreement and will further be deemed to have set aside a maximum amount equivalent to 25% of the basic wages earned during the year for purpose of 'set-on' (adjustment) in subsequent years.

In 1954, this Mill has an available surplus of profit calculated according to the Full Bench Formula which is adequate to grant Bonus equivalent to 8% of basic wages earned during the year. This mill will, first, set aside out of the available surplus of profit after providing all prior charges including taxes, at least a minimum amount of Rs. 10,000/- and then to the residue, it will add, out of the amount deemed to have been set aside as "reserve for Bonus" in the previous year, an amount adequate to make up the total amount equivalent to 25% of basic wages earned during the year (8%—Minimum amount set aside+adequate amount out of amount deemed to have been set aside in previous year for 'set-on' (adjustment)=25% of basic wages earned during the year) and the total amount thus arrived at will be paid as Bonus.

In 1955, this Mill has no available surplus of profit calculated according to the Full Bench Formula for grant of Bonus (or has made a loss) and will, therefore, be required to grant minimum Bonus equivalent to 4.8% of the basic wages earned during the year under the Agreement. But as it has with it a part of the amount (equivalent to 25% of basic wages earned during the year) deemed to have been set aside as "reserve" for Bonus in year 1953, it will pay Bonus out of such residue of Bonus 'Reserve' but not below the minimum (i.e. 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year).

In 1956, this Mill makes loss (or has no available surplus of profit according to the Full Bench Formula). It will, therefore, pay minimum Bonus equivalent to 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year under the Agreement. The mill will be entitled to 'set-off' (adjust) such amount of minimum Bonus (i.e. 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year) against the amount of Bonus that may be payable in subsequent years.

In 1957, this mill makes loss (or has no available surplus of profit according to the Full Bench Formula). It will pay the minimum Bonus equivalent to 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year under the provisions of the Agreement. The Mill will be entitled to 'set-off' (adjust) this amount against the amount of Bonus that may be payable in subsequent years. The Mill, however, will not be able to reimburse itself for this amount together with the amount distributed in year 1956, out of the amount of Bonus that may be payable in the next year i.e. 1958 as the agreement will not be operative in respect of Bonus for that year.

ILLUSTRATION II.

In 1953, Mill 'B' has an available surplus of profit calculated according to the Full Bench Formula which is adequate to grant Bonus equivalent to 37.5% of the basic wages earned during the year. Under the Agreement, however, it will pay Bonus at the maximum rate viz. 25% of the basic wages earned during the year and will further be deemed to have set aside an amount equivalent to 12.5% of basic wages earned during the year as "reserve" for Bonus for purpose of 'set-on' (adjustment) in subsequent years.

In 1954, this Mill has an available surplus of profit calculated according to the Full Bench Formula which is adequate to grant Bonus equivalent to 8% of basic wages earned during the year. This Mill will first set aside, out of available surplus of profit after providing all prior charges including taxes, at least a minimum amount of Rs. 10,000/- and then to the residue, it will add the amount of "reserve" for Bonus deemed to have been set aside in year 1953 and the total amount thus arrived at (viz. 8%—the minimum amount set aside+12.5%) will be paid as Bonus.

In 1955, this Mill has an available surplus of profit calculated according to the Full Bench Formula which is adequate to grant Bonus equivalent to 50% of basic wages earned during the year. Under the Agreement, this mill will grant maximum Bonus equivalent to 25% of the basic wages earned during the year and will be deemed to have set aside out of the residue, an amount equivalent to 25% of basic wages earned during the year as "reserve" for Bonus for purpose of 'set-on' (adjustment) in subsequent years.

In 1956, this Mill has an available surplus of profit calculated according to the Full Bench Formula which is adequate to grant Bonus equivalent to 83% of basic wages earned during the year. Under the provisions of the Agreement, this mill pays maximum Bonus equivalent to 25% of basic wages earned during the year. However, it will not be deemed to have set aside any part of the surplus profit as "reserve" for Bonus for purpose of 'set-on' (adjustment) in future years, as it is deemed to have set aside in the previous year for purpose of 'set-on' (adjustment) an amount equivalent to 25% of basic wages earned during the year.

In 1957, this Mill makes loss (or has no available surplus for grant of Bonus according to the Full Bench Formula) and will, therefore, be required to grant minimum Bonus equivalent to 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year. However, it is deemed to have set aside during a previous year an amount equivalent to 25% of basic wages earned during the year as 'reserve' for Bonus for purpose of 'set-on' (adjustment). Hence it will be deemed to draw upon this "reserve" and grant Bonus at the maximum rate of 25% of basic wages earned during the year.

ILLUSTRATION III.

In 1953, Mill 'C' has no available surplus of profit for Bonus, calculated according to the Full Bench Formula. It pays minimum Bonus equivalent to 4.8% of the basic wages earned during the year.

In 1954, this Mill has a surplus of available profit calculated according to the Full Bench Formula which is adequate to grant Bonus equivalent to 42% of basic wages earned during the year. Under the Agreement, this Mill will (i) be required to pay Bonus at the maximum rate, i.e. 25% of the basic wages earned during the year, and (ii) be deemed to set aside for purpose of 'set-on' (adjustment) an amount equivalent to 17% of basic wages earned during the year out of the residue of surplus profits. However, as it has paid minimum Bonus (i.e. 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year) in respect of previous year, it will be entitled to deduct such amount from the amount of maximum Bonus (i.e. 25% of basic wages earned during the year) that will be payable under the Agreement in respect of the current year and then will distribute the balance $(25\% - 4.8\% = 20.2\%)$ of basic wages earned during the year as Bonus.

In 1955, this Mill has available surplus of profit calculated according to the Full Bench Formula which is adequate to grant Bonus equivalent to 8% of basic wages earned during the year. This Mill will first set aside out of the available surplus of profits after providing all prior charges including taxes, at least a minimum amount of Rs. 10,000/-. Then to the residue, it will add the amount equivalent to 17% of basic wages earned during the year deemed to have been set aside in year 1954 for purpose of 'set-on' (adjustment) and distribute as Bonus the total amount thus arrived at $(8\% - \text{minimum amount set aside} + 17\%)$. The amount of Rs. 10,000/- minimum set aside out of the available surplus and left with the mills under this clause shall not be required to be utilised for the purpose of 'set-on' (adjustment) i.e. for grant of Bonus in any subsequent year.

In 1956, this Mill has no available surplus of profit calculated according to the Full Bench Formula. It pays minimum Bonus equivalent to 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year. It will be entitled to 'set-off' (adjust) the amount of such minimum Bonus (i.e. 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year) against the amount of Bonus that may be payable in the subsequent year.

In 1957, this Mill has an available surplus of profit calculated according to the Full Bench Formula which is adequate to grant Bonus equivalent to 8% of basic wages earned during the year. The mill, however, will (i) first deduct out of this available surplus of profits arrived at after providing all prior charges including taxes, at least a minimum amount of Rs. 10,000/-; and (ii) then out of the residue, further take out an amount equivalent to 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year paid by it as minimum Bonus in the previous year; and (iii) then utilise the balance $(8\% - \text{minimum amount} - 4.8\%)$ for payment of Bonus.

However, if the balance of surplus profit is not adequate to pay minimum Bonus (i.e. 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year), the mill will pay minimum Bonus (i.e. 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year) and will be entitled to 'set-off' (adjust) the amount of difference between the minimum (i.e. 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year) and the balance of surplus profits $(8\% - \text{minimum amount} - 4.8\%)$ against the amount of Bonus that may be payable in respect of subsequent year. The Mill will, however, be unable to reimburse itself for such difference as the Agreement will not be operative in respect of Bonus claim for 1958.

ILLUSTRATION IV:

In 1953, Mill 'D' has no available surplus of profit calculated according to the Full Bench Formula. It pays minimum Bonus equivalent to 4.8% of the basic wages earned during the year under the Agreement. This mill will be entitled to 'set-off' (adjust) the amount of such minimum Bonus (i.e. 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year) against the amount of Bonus that may be payable in subsequent years.

In 1954, this mill makes loss. It pays minimum Bonus equivalent to 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year with provision for "set-off" (adjustment).

In 1955, this Mill has no available surplus of profit calculated according to the Full Bench Formula. It pays minimum Bonus equivalent to 4.8% of the basic wages earned during the year with provision for 'set-off' (adjustment).

In 1956, this Mill has an available surplus of profit calculated according to the Full Bench Formula which is adequate to grant Bonus equivalent to 83% of basic wages earned during the year. Under the Agreement, this Mill (i) will be required to pay Bonus at the maximum rate of 25% of basic wages earned during the year, and (ii) will be deemed to set aside for purpose of 'set-on' (adjustment) an amount equivalent to 25% of basic wages earned during the year.

This mill, however, will (i) first take out of the amount of maximum Bonus equivalent to 25% of basic wages earned during the year that will be payable under the Agreement, the total amount paid by it as minimum Bonus (i.e. 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year) in the previous three years equivalent to 14.4% ($4.8\% \times 3$) of the basic wages earned during the year, and (ii) then pay the residue (viz. $25\% - 14.4\% = 10.6\%$) of basic wages earned during the year as Bonus.

In 1957, this Mill has available surplus of profit calculated according to the Full Bench Formula which is adequate to grant Bonus equivalent to 12.5% of basic wages earned during the year.

This Mill will (i) first set aside out of the available surplus of profits arrived at after providing all prior charges including taxes, at least a minimum amount of Rs. 10,000/-; and (ii) then add to the residue, by drawing upon the amount of surplus of profits deemed to have been set aside by it in the previous year i.e. 1956 an amount adequate to make up a total amount equivalent to 25% of the basic wages earned during the year and pay Bonus at the maximum rate (i.e. 25% of the basic wages earned during the year).

6. That the amount of "reserve" for Bonus deemed to have been set aside by a mill for the purpose of 'set-on' (adjustment) under the provisions of this Agreement which remains unutilised at the end of year 1957 (or on 31-3-1958 or on 30-6-1957 or on 30-9-1957 as the case may be) after grant of Bonus for that year, shall lapse and the employees shall have no right to such amount for satisfying their claim for Bonus at any future time after the termination of this Agreement. Similarly, the amount or amounts of minimum Bonus (i.e. 4.8% of basic wages earned during the year) paid by a mill during the period of the Agreement which it is entitled to "set off" (adjust) against the amount of Bonus that was payable during the period of five years under the provisions of this Agreement but which remains unadjusted on 31-12-1957 or on 31-3-1958 or on 30-6-1957 or on 30-9-1957, as the case may be, shall lapse on the termination of this Agreement and the mill shall not be entitled to "set off" (adjust) such amount against the amounts of Bonus that may become payable in future years.

7. That mills shall pay to their employees Bonus according to the terms and conditions provided under this Agreement in respect of each of the five years from year 1953 to year 1957, both inclusive.

Provided that the Bonus in respect of year 1953 shall be paid before the 1st November 1955 and the Bonus in respect of years 1954 to 1957, shall be paid within a period of two months of the date that will be mutually fixed by the parties for distribution of Bonus in the respective years, subject to the following conditions: (i) In the case of women employees who have been on maternity leave during the year, the maternity allowance drawn by them shall be included in their earnings for the purpose of calculating Bonus; (ii) Employees who have been dismissed on account of misconduct causing financial loss to the Company will not be entitled to Bonus to the extent of the loss caused; (iii) Persons who are eligible for Bonus but are no longer in the service of the mill shall submit their claim within one year of the declaration of Bonus and the Bonus shall be paid within one month of the receipt of the claim. Failing an application within the period specified, the right to claim the Bonus shall not survive.

8. That the Ahmedabad Millowners' Association and the Textile Labour Association will jointly determine in case of each individual member mill the available surplus of profit and fix the quantum of Bonus to be distributed in terms of the Agreement on basis of the Balance-Sheet of the year after obtaining the necessary information regarding Bonus provision, statutory depreciation etc. from the mills after the publication of Balance-Sheets. Such necessary data shall be supplied by the mills to both the Associations within a period of two months of the publication of the Balance-Sheet or before the end of the month of September of the next year whichever is later. (d) Sunday work will be in accordance with the provisions of the Factories Act, that is to say, those working on a Sunday will receive leave in lieu but will receive no extra or double wages or Dearness Allowance or extra and/or overtime pay on this account.

13. LEAVE AND HOLIDAYS:

Workmen are entitled to leave as hereunder:

A. PRIVILEGE LEAVE (NON-CUMULATIVE):

(a) After one year's continuous active service 12 days' leave with basic pay annually. The period of such leave will be fixed by the Company in each year and is normally given sometime between April and May, although the dates may not be exactly the same for every one. The facilities of the Factories Act provisions in the matter of leave are fully available under this scheme as a whole including the provisions of sick leave and casual leave.

(b) To meet the exigencies of production and special processes and for the overhauling of plant and equipment, certain departments or workmen who will be notified at least two weeks in advance and who will be required to work during the period of the general privilege leave, will receive their privilege leave with basic pay, either before or after or in the alternative if any such workman not desiring to avail of the privilege leave, he will receive pay at the basic rate for the leave in the normal course and for the period of work will receive payment at double the basic rate or on the actual production, as the case may be.

B. NATIONAL AND FESTIVAL HOLIDAYS:

(a) The following thirteen National and Festival holidays are granted to workmen with basic pay:—

1.	Republic Day	1 day
2.	Saraswati Pujah	1 day
3.	Doljatra	1 day
4.	1st Baisakh	1 day
5.	Id-ul-Fitr	1 day
6.	May Day	1 day
7.	Independence Day	1 day
8.	Mahatma Gandhi Birthday	1 day
9—12.	Durgah Pujah	4 days
13.	Christmas Day	1 day
Total					13 days

If any of the paid holidays falls on a non-working day, the next working day will not be declared as a holiday, but salary or wages for that day on the basis of the basic rate will be given to all qualified workmen.

If all the National and Festival holidays fall on working days, in that case one day in lieu will have to be worked. If only one National or Festival holiday falls on a non-working day, even then one more day will be worked in lieu; if two National and/or Festival holidays fall on non-working days then still one more day will be worked in lieu; but if three or more such holidays fall on non-working days, then no more extra day will be worked in lieu. For such working in lieu, only the normal salary or wages for the work or the day as the case may be, will be payable, that is to say, no extra or double salary or wages will be paid.

(b) Only those workmen who are present or are on sanctioned leave with pay on the working day immediately before and the working day following a National and/or Festival holiday scheduled as a paid holiday will qualify for pay for that holiday unless they are granted leave covering either or both the days in question.

C. SICK LEAVE (NON-CUMULATIVE):

After one year's continuous active service and upon approved medical certification 15 working days' sick leave with basic pay per year.

Workmen qualified by service for the benefit of 15 days' sick leave with pay annually who, in any calendar year, do not utilise the whole of such sick leave will, at the beginning of the following year, if still in the Company's employ, be eligible to receive payment at their basic rate of pay as on 31st December, for any unused balance of such sick leave.

This privilege will also be extended to such new workmen as, during any calendar year, become qualified to receive sick leave with pay. For the remainder of that year such workmen will be deemed to be due 1.25 days' sick leave for each completed calendar month of service or major portion thereof, and, if still in the Company's service, will, at the beginning of the following year, be eligible to receive payment on the basis aforesaid for any unused balance of sick leave standing to their credit on 31st December.

D. CASUAL LEAVE (NON-CUMULATIVE):

(b) Casual leave may not be availed of for more than three consecutive days at a time and is not ordinarily allowed to continue with holidays or any other leave.

(c) Application for casual leave must be made in writing to the Personnel Officer through departmental heads at least one day in advance, except in emergent circumstances of which full proof must be produced.

E. ORDINARY LEAVE:

(a) After 12 months' continuous service, a workman is qualified for ordinary leave without pay for a total of 20 days in any one year. The granting of leave is at the discretion of the Company and permission is subject to the exigencies of production.

(b) Application for ordinary leave must be submitted in writing to the departmental heads seven clear days before the leave is required. Leave is considered granted when the applicant is in possession of a leave card exchanged for his control card from the Personnel Department.

F. PROTRACTED ILLNESS:

No workman will be discharged for protracted illness unless his illness exceeds six months or such other reasonable period as may be considered necessary beyond six months, provided he has from time to time obtained permission from the Company. Further, it is understood that although the Company will make every effort on return from protracted illness of the workman, the same job and/or rate may not be available to him.

General: Leave is considered as sanctioned when the applicant receives leave card from the Personnel Department or a communication granting leave. Leave can only be sanctioned and recorded in full days except on emergency and/or sickness.

If a workman is out of work for more than six months within the qualifying year all such leave with pay will be proportionately deducted for the period in excess of six months. This will not apply to Casual leave and Sick leave.

14. RE-ALLOCATION OF WORKMEN RETURNING FROM LEAVE:

(a) A workman returning from sanctioned leave on due date and time will proceed immediately to his old department and operation, or to the same rated similar operation in another department. If this is not possible the workman will be employed in the Training and Allocation Centre pending a suitable vacancy, but during this period will receive pay at the basic rate for the operation upon which he was last employed. In the event of a change of production having taken place during his absence on leave, the returning workman will have to accept the change in the same manner as all or some of his co-workers in the same department.

This provision does not apply to workmen rejoining after protracted illness.

(b) A workman who overstays sanctioned leave forfeits the privileges stated in Rules 14(a) and is treated as absent; but should he present himself for work within six working days of the expiry of his sanctioned leave, and the provisions of Rule 15 permit, he will be sent to the Training and Allocation Centre until a suitable vacancy occurs in a regular department in his operation. During this period, he will receive the "trained" rate of pay applicable under the Rules for his particular operation.

(c) Should a workman on due return from sick leave be deemed by the Company's Medical Officer temporarily unfit to work in a regular department, the Medical Officer may recommend that he be employed for a period of two weeks in the Training and Allocation Centre, where he shall be paid as provided in Rule 14(a). At the end of two weeks, the Medical Officer of the Company will re-examine the workman and may certify him for a further two weeks in the Training and Allocation Centre. At the end of this extended period, however, if the workman is still found unfit, he will be given such leave with pay as due to him or without pay, for further reasonable period as possible unless it is a fit case to come under Clause 22(a).

15. LATENESS AND ABSENTEEISM:

(a) A workman not at his working place within five minutes of the generally appointed time for the starting of his work will be considered late, but will be allowed to commence work.

(b) If a workman's lateness in attending exceeds one hour, he may not be permitted to enter his department and/or to commence work until the commencement of the next working period besides being liable to disciplinary action for absence.

(c) Any workman who after presenting his Control Card ticket is found absent from his proper place of work during working hours without permission shall be presumed to be guilty of the offence of absenteeism and will be treated and for half the day in case his absence commences after the recess period and for half the day in case his absence commences before the recess period. Such workman, apart from being punished otherwise, is liable to receive no wages and Dearness Allowance for the period of absence provided, however, if the absence does not exceed five minutes the punishment for the first offence will be only warning.

(d) No workman will be allowed during working hours to go for medical attendance except in case of serious nature and permitted by the Department and Personnel Department for minor ailments, if any, he will be attended to by the Foreman or some other executive in his own Department. If any workman so leaves his place of work without obtaining written permission, he will be treated as absent in accordance with the provisions mentioned in Clause (c) above and dealt with as such. Any workman who feels that he must have medical attendance will be given sick leave through the Personnel Department for the remaining period with or without pay as he may be entitled to and for further extension of such leave, if necessary, application under the rules must follow.

(e) A workman will be deemed absent, if he fails to attend to duty, without first obtaining written permission from the Personnel Department.

(f) Any workman guilty of the offence of absenteeism will, apart from being liable to deduction of wages and D.A., be further liable to disciplinary action.

(g) Any workman committing the offence of absenteeism, except continuous absence of seven consecutive working days, on the first three occasions will be deemed to have committed a minor offence and on the fourth occasion will be deemed to have committed a major offence, and is liable to such action as provided herein elsewhere.

(h) A workman who absents himself without leave for seven consecutive working days or more will be deemed to have left the services of the Company without notice thereby terminating his employment, and in such case the employment is automatically terminated and the Company may or may not give any notice informing such termination. If the workman within two weeks of the commencement of the absence offers an explanation to the satisfaction of the Personnel Officer both as regards inability to apply, inform, obtain leave earlier and the reasons of absence, the absence may be excused without pay and D. A. or with pay, if due and D. A., with such other disciplinary action as may be necessary and the automatic termination of service will be treated as cancelled. If, however, no such explanation is offered within the time mentioned above, no workman will be eligible to be excused for any reason whatsoever.

Promotion is given at the discretion of the Company when suitable vacancies occur according to seniority, present efficiency, past records of conduct and efficiency, health at the time of promotion, age, nature of the job, ability and merit. Should a workman be placed temporarily in charge of a work in a more senior position either in Supervisory and Clerical staff or otherwise, this will neither be deemed as a promotion nor will it carry higher salary. If, however, one acts in a higher position for more than eight weeks or two months in a year, for the period beyond eight weeks or two months, he will be paid some reward or at the minimum of the higher grade or if his salary is already higher than the minimum, then at the next higher scale of the grade acted, as Acting Allowance. For such acting work in a higher position for five days or one full working week at a time, he will not be eligible to any extra payment at all; but if such acting work extends beyond five days or one full working week at a time and falls short of eight weeks or two months totally, he will nevertheless be eligible to payment of 50 per cent of the Acting Allowance as aforesaid.

17. TRANSFER:

AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE TATA IRON AND STEEL COMPANY LIMITED AND THE TATA WORKERS' UNION

1 THIS AGREEMENT dated the 8th January, 1956, is between the TATA IRON AND STEEL COMPANY, LIMITED, Jamshedpur, (hereinafter referred to as "the Company") and the TATA WORKERS' UNION, (hereinafter referred to as "the Union").

I. PREAMBLE

2. The purpose of this Agreement is to establish and maintain orderly and cordial relations between the Company and the Union so as to promote the interests of the employees covered by this Agreement and the efficient operation of the Company's business. The parties realise the importance and need of maintaining such good and co-operative management-labour relations for the effective and timely implementation of the schemes of modernisation and expansion programmes involving a capital expenditure of about Rs. 110 crores.

II. MUTUAL SECURITY.

3. To further the objectives of increased goodwill and co-operation, the Company and the Union give each to the other the following assurances for their mutual security.

4. The Company undertakes as hereinafter stated:

5. The Company will continue to recognise the Tata Workers' Union as the sole bargaining agent of employees at Jamshedpur in the Union sphere. In the case of supervisory staff, the Company will continue to deal with the Supervisory Unit in the Union in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as heretofore.

The Company agrees, in principle, to a Union membership security system and to the collection of Union subscriptions through the payroll in respect of employees other than supervisory staff. The Company will be prepared to join the Union in approaching the Central or State Governments for any alteration that might be required in the law in order to permit the bringing into effect of the maintenance of membership and "check-off" provisions referred to above.

6. The Company will continue to give all reasonable facilities to the office-bearers of the Union to carry out their duties in the best interests of the employees so however that nothing is done which is detrimental to the normal and effective operation of the Company's business.

7. The Company will continue to give all reasonable facilities to the elected group representatives of the employees on behalf of the Union in the different departments and sections of the Company to attend the Union Committee meetings, general meetings and conferences and generally to discharge their duties as representatives of their respective groups provided however the time spent on such work does not interfere with their normal duty as employees.

8. The Company will continue to give facilities to the Union representatives on the Joint Committees to attend the Committee meetings during their working hours and to pay them their due wages for the time so spent.

9. The Company including its officers and representatives at all levels is bound by the provisions of this Agreement.

10. The Union undertakes on behalf of itself and each of its members as hereinafter stated:

11. The Union continues to recognise the right of the Company to take disciplinary action, according to the provisions of the Standing Orders against such employees as indulge in unauthorized activities. However an issue of fact of such nature may be subject to the grievance procedure.

12. The Union recognizes that there are functions, powers and authorities belonging solely to the Company prominent among which, but by no means wholly inclusive, are the rights of introducing new or improved methods or equipment, deciding the number and location of plants, the nature of equipment or machinery, the products to be manufactured, the methods and/or processes of manufacturing, the scheduling of production, the method of training employees, the designing and engineering of products and the control of raw materials, provided that where the employees' interests are adversely affected, the Union is consulted before the Company takes a decision and the Union reserves the right to represent their cases to the Management.

13. Subject to the provisions of this Agreement, the Union recognizes the right of the Company:

(i) to hire, transfer, promote or discipline employees, provided that, in hiring a person, ordinarily the normal procedure in that behalf will be followed and provided further that no one is transferred, discharged or disciplined without a reasonable cause and without going through the normal procedure. The reasonableness of the cause, however, may be subject to the prescribed grievance procedure;

(ii) to fix the number of men required for the normal operation of a section or department, provided that in the case of the existing sections and departments the Union is consulted before the Company takes a decision;

(iii) to make or change such rules and regulations regarding employees as the Company may deem necessary and proper, provided that such rules or changes in the rules are fair and reasonable and are made after consultation with the Union;

(iv) to eliminate, change or consolidate jobs, sections, departments or divisions. Provided that when the employees' interests are adversely affected the Union is consulted before the Company takes a decision and provided further that where jobs are consolidated and reduced number of employees are asked to increase their individual efforts in order to perform substantially the same amount of work formerly done by a larger number of employees and without any fair compensation in the form of incentive bonus or in any other form, the Union reserves the right to represent their case to the Management.

14. The Union, including its officers and representatives at all levels, is bound by the provisions of this Agreement.

III. CLOSER ASSOCIATION OF EMPLOYEES WITH MANAGEMENT

15. The Company appreciates the view that an increasing measure of association of Works employees with Management in the working of the industry is desirable and would help (a) in promoting increased productivity for the general benefit of the enterprise, the employees and the country, (b) in giving employees a better understanding of their role and importance in the working of the industry and in the process of production, and (c) in satisfying the urge for self-expression; and the Company and the Union agree to discuss and devise at an early date ways and means of progressively achieving that objective at appropriate levels and by gradual stages. The manner and method by which employees would be represented in the process of such association will be among the matters to be so discussed.

IV. PRODUCTIVITY

16. The Union, its officers and its representatives agree to give their full support and co-operation to the Company in the matter of securing improvement in labour productivity. The parties agree on the need to establish a standard force in each of the existing departments and declare that such standard force shall be fixed by the Company for securing improvement in labour productivity after consultation with the Union.

17. The Company assures the Union that: (i) there will be no retrenchment of existing employees; (ii) those employees required for jobs other than those in which they are at present employed will, wherever necessary, be trained for other jobs; (iii) the present average earnings of employees transferred or under training will be guaranteed to them.

18. The Union agrees that fixation of the number of men required for the normal operation of each existing section or department as referred to in the Clause 13(ii) shall be carried out and completed within a period of one year from the date of this Agreement. If there is any disagreement regarding such number, then the matter shall be referred to arbitration by independent experts to be mutually agreed upon by the Company and the Union and failing agreement to be appointed by the Government of India. The decision of such experts shall be binding on the Company and the Union.

19. The Company will be entitled, where there are more men in a section or department than the number fixed under Clauses 13(ii) and 18, to leave vacancies unfilled and also to transfer surplus men in one department to fill up essential vacancies in other departments or for employment on new plant as provided in the Standing Orders.

20. In view of the schemes of modernisation and expansion programmes referred to in the preamble and requiring men for manning the new sections and departments, and in view of the provision in Clause 19 regarding vacancies unfilled and transfer of surplus men after the fixation of the standard force of existing sections or departments, the Company agrees that vacancies occurring hereafter will be filled, except with the concurrence of the Union, till such time as the standard force is fixed under Clauses 13(ii) and 18.

V. JOB DESCRIPTION, JOB EVALUATION AND WAGE STRUCTURE

21. The Company and the Union agree that a programme of job evaluation should be undertaken in order to determine the value of each job and eliminate inequities in order subsequently to simplify the existing structure of wages and other payments to employees and place it on a rational basis.

It is further agreed that a Joint Committee consisting of an equal number of representatives of the Company and of the Union shall be appointed with an independent expert as Chairman for the work of job evaluation. The parties agree that the Joint Committee shall consist of suitably qualified representatives of the Company and the Union. The parties agree that the classification of jobs embodied in the report of this Joint Committee shall be accepted by both parties as forming the basis of the future structure of wages and other emoluments. Thereafter the parties shall negotiate the rates of the future structure of wages and emoluments.

VI. REVISION OF WAGES AND GRATUITY

22. As the review of the wage structure as mentioned hereinbefore is likely to take time and the Union has requested an immediate increase in the wages of the lower paid employees and ministerial staff and also the revision of the gratuity rules, the Company agrees to revise the wages of such employees on an ad hoc basis and to increase gratuity payments as mentioned below:

A. To all employees of the Company (including temporary employees and Company's employees on construction work) in Jamshedpur drawing:

(a) basic wages up to Rs. 3 per day for daily-rated employees; (b) basic wages up to Rs. 75 per month for monthly-rated employees; and (c) basic salaries up to Rs. 140 per month for clerical staff, including the typists, a flat ad hoc additional payment (by way of special allowance not to rank as part of substantive pay for any purpose) of annas two per day for category (a) and Rs. 3-4-0 per-month for categories (b) and (c) as from 1st January 1956; and a further flat ad hoc additional payment (by way of special allowance not to rank as part of substantive pay for any purpose) of annas two per day for category (a) and Rs. 3-4-0 per month for categories (b) and (c) as from 1st January 1957.

Marginal relief will be granted to employees drawing more than Rs. 3 per day in the case of daily-rated employees, Rs. 75 per mensem in the case of monthly-rated employees and Rs. 140 per mensem in the case of clerical staff.

B. For the purposes of the gratuity rules, in the case of all employees in Jamshedpur and no others, drawing basic salary or wages not exceeding Rs. 500 per month in the case of monthly-rated employees and equivalent daily rate in the case of daily-rated employees, the dearness allowance (but not the emergency bonus or food rebate or other allowances) shall be added to the basic salaries and wages for computing gratuity payments.

23. Subject to the provisions of Clause 22, the Company and the Union agree that there should be no further demands for increase in wages or emoluments (including gratuities) of employees until the coming into operation of the provisions of Clause 24. No further applications to the Permanent Joint Rates Committee shall be made or entertained unless there is a change in the job content.

VII. REVISION OF WAGES AND SEPARATION OF WORKS AND TOWN

24. (a) After the completion of the expansion of the Company's plant and of the job evaluation programme mentioned in clause 21, the Company and the Union agree to negotiate revised wages and emoluments separately for: (i) workers in the plant; (ii) subject to the provisions of Clause 5, supervisory staff in the plant (within the sphere of the Supervisory Unit of the Union); and (iii) town and other employees outside the Works.

(b) The Company declares that in such negotiations it will be prepared to offer, in recognition of the increased labour productivity and the larger profits resulting from the plant expansion programme, an appreciable upward revision in the wages and emoluments of the Works employees.

(c) The Company also records its considered view that as a result of past efforts to maintain parity of earnings between jobs in the Works and those outside the Works, the emoluments paid for the latter jobs have increased disproportionately and are substantially higher than those earned in other places in India and that therefore the larger profits resulting from the increased labour productivity in the Works should not entitle the Town and other employees outside the Works to an upward revision but their cases shall be considered on their own merits.

VIII. CONSTRUCTION OF QUARTERS

25. (i) The Company agrees to undertake to construct 300 one-room quarters and 1,700 two-room quarters by 31st March 1959, subject to the satisfactory conclusion of the land acquisition proceedings now pending. It is agreed that some of these quarters may be temporarily allocated to the construction staff recruited from outside Jamshedpur by the Consulting Engineers in connection with the two-million ton expansion project.

(ii) The Company agrees to instal, as early as possible, water taps in the great majority of the Company's quarters at a reasonable charge in the shape of increased rent.

and (iii) The Company agrees to extend the indoor accommodation of the Main Hospital.

IX. PROMOTIONS

26. It is the established policy of the Company that when vacancies occur, it shall fill them by internal promotion, wherever possible, rather than by outside recruitment, so as to ensure a maximum of opportunity for employees with demonstrated ability.

27. Promotions to non-supervisory posts shall be made on the basis of seniority provided the individual concerned is competent for the higher post. In order to ascertain his competence, his past performance will be taken into account.

28. No person will be promoted to a post for which a trade test has been prescribed unless he has passed the trade test.

29. Promotions to supervisory posts, which shall commence with the post of Assistant Foreman or its equivalent, will be made on the basis of merit from among those who possess the prescribed qualification and/or experience. A detailed procedure for promotion from the ranks of workmen to supervisory posts will be formulated by the Company in consultation with the Union.

30. Promotions to temporary posts will be governed in accordance with the existing rules which have been agreed upon by the Company and the Union.

X. GRIEVANCE PROCEDURE

31. The Company and the Union agree that the objective of a good grievance procedure is the settlement of a grievance in the shortest possible time and at the lowest possible step.

32. It is agreed that a grievance procedure formulated in consultation with the Union shall be introduced in all departments and shall be strictly followed, subject to such modifications as may be agreed upon by the Company and the Union.

33. In departments where the grievance procedure is for any reason not introduced, an employee having any complaint or grievance shall first discuss the matter with his foreman. In the event a satisfactory settlement cannot be arrived at, it will be referred to the departmental head. The employee can at his option be assisted or represented by the Union representative in the department.

If the problem is still not satisfactorily adjusted, it may be referred to the appropriate Joint Committee and then to the Central Works Committee, if necessary, in accordance with the prescribed procedure.

XI. WORKS COMMITTEES

34. The Company and the Union agree to examine the working of the Works Committees with a view to improve the same. The Company will formulate proposals in this connection, which will be discussed with the Union and implemented with such modifications as may be agreed to by the Company and the Union.

XII. DISCIPLINE

35. The Union agrees to co-operate with the Company in maintaining discipline and avoiding waste of time by the employees.

36. The Company and the Union agree that while on the one hand any disciplinary action taken by the Company should be fair and just and not arbitrary, on the other hand, no action should be taken by the Union which short-circuits the established procedure. In particular, (a) the Union will not ask the Company to suspend action in individual cases pending a prior discussion with its representatives, and (b) the Company and the Union will co-operate in ensuring that differences are discussed and settled at the appropriate level. Intervention at the top Union and Management levels should take place only in exceptional cases.

XIII. DURATION OF AGREEMENT

37. The Company and the Union agree that this Agreement is adequate to the purpose set out in the preamble and that any attempt on the part of the Company or the Union to by-pass any of the provisions of the Agreement shall be construed as a violation of the Agreement.

38. This Agreement shall remain in effect in the first instance for a period of three years. It may be amended at any time by mutual consent. Its provisions shall conform with the Central or State laws, but the voidance of any clause or clauses for reasons of illegality shall not affect the balance of this Agreement which shall remain in full force and effect.

AGREEMENT BETWEEN THE MODI SPINNING & WEAVING MILLS CO., LTD., MODINAGAR AND THE MODI SPINNING & WEAVING MILLS KARAMCHARI UNION, MODINAGAR

This Agreement is being entered into between the Modi Spinning & Weaving Mills Co., Ltd., Modinagar (hereinafter called the Company) and the Modi Spinning & Weaving Mills Karmachari Union, Modinagar (hereinafter called the Union).

In order to establish and maintain orderly and cordial relations between the Company and the Union, so as to promote the interest of the employees covered by this agreement, and the efficient operation of the Company's business, and realising the importance and need of maintaining such good and co-operative, management-labour relations for the effective and timely implementation of the schemes of modernisation, productivity and expansion, the parties hereby enter into the following agreement:—

I. MUTUAL SECURITY.

(1) To further the objectives of increased goodwill and co-operation, the Company and the Union give each to the other, the following assurances for their mutual security:

(2) The Company undertakes as hereinafter stated:—

The Company will continue to recognise the Modi Spng. & Wvg. Mills Karmachari Union, as the sole bargaining agent of the employees of the Modi Spinning and Weaving Mills, Modinagar (which includes Modi Hosiery Works and the Modi Rayon and Silk Mills).

(3) The Company will continue to give all reasonable facilities to the office bearers of the Union to carry out their duties in the best interest of the Union and employees, so that nothing is done which is detrimental to the normal and effective operation of the Company's business.

(4) The Company will continue to give facilities to the Union representative on the Joint Committee to attend the Committee meetings during their working hours and to pay them their due wages for the time so spent.

(5) The Company including its officers and representatives at all levels, is bound by the provisions of this agreement.

The Union undertakes on behalf of itself and each of its employees; as hereinafter stated:—

(6) The Union recognises and will continue to recognise the following rights of the Company:—

(i) To take disciplinary action, according to the provisions of the Standing Orders, against such employees as indulge in acts not authorised by the Standing Orders. However, an issue of facts of such nature may be subject to the grievance procedure.

(ii) To exercise the rights of introducing new or improved methods of equipments, deciding the number and location of plants, the nature of equipment and machinery, the products to be manufactured, the methods of processes of manufacturing, the scheduling of production, the method of training of employees, the designing and engineering of products, and control of raw material, provided that where the interest of the employees is adversely affected the Union will be consulted, and the Union reserves the right of representation to the Management.

(iii) To hire, transfer, promote or discipline employees according to the procedure given in the Standing Orders. The reasonableness of the action will, however, be subject to the grievance procedure.

(iv) To fix the number of men, required for the normal operation of a section or department, provided that in the case of the existing section or department, the Union is consulted before a decision is taken.

(v) To make or change such rules and regulations regarding employees as the Company may deem necessary or proper provided these are fair and reasonable and are made after consultation with the Union.

(vi) To eliminate, change, or consolidate jobs, sections, departments or divisions, provided that when such an action affects the interest of the employees adversely, the Union is consulted before the Company takes a decision.

Provided further, that where jobs are consolidated and reduced number of employees are asked to increase their individual effort in order to perform substantially the same amount of work, formerly done by a larger number of employees, and without any fair compensation in the form of incentive bonus or in any other form, the Union reserves the right to represent their case to the Management.

(6) In case of disagreement between the Union and the Company on any issue, the matter will be referred to the Conciliation Committee in the factory.

(7) The Union including its officers and representatives at all levels, is bound by the provisions of this Agreement.

II. CLOSER ASSOCIATION OF EMPLOYEES INTO MANAGEMENT.

(8) The Company appreciates the view that an increasing measure of association of the employees with the management, in the working of the industry, is desirable and would help:—(a) In promoting increased productivity for the benefit of industry, employees, and the country. (b) In giving employees a better understanding of their role and importance in the production. (c) In satisfying the urge for self-expression.

and the Company and the Union, therefore, agree to discuss and form 'Joint Consultation Committees' within a period of three months from the formation of a Central Committee for the undernoted purposes to begin with:—

(i) General problems which have an influence on the operation of undertaking. (ii) Conditions in the plant such as ventilations, lighting, noise, temperature and factory hygiene. (iii) Amenities such as rest rooms, health services, housing, canteen services and recreation. (iv) Safety and accident prevention. (v) Measures of increasing efficiency.

(9) A Central Committee will be formed within a period of one month from the date of signing of this agreement, having an equal number of the representatives nominated by the Union as well as the Company, subject to a maximum of seven from each side. The purpose of this Committee will be to form committees as mentioned above, to decide scope and details of work, to supervise their working, and to attend to the functions mentioned in item (iii) and (iv) of column 8.

'Joint Committees' will be formed in each department, for the purposes mentioned in items (i), (ii), (iv) and (v) of para 8 above, and will consist of equal number of nominees of the Union and the Company, but not more than four from each side.

The Labour Welfare Officer will be acting as convener of the Central Committee and all the mill committees. The departmental committees will be convened by the department heads and record maintained by them. On a demand from the workmen, Union or Management, meeting will definitely be called within three days.

III. PRODUCTIVITY—JOB EVALUATION AND WAGE STRUCTURE.

(10) As an atmosphere of good human relations based on active co-operation between the employers and workers, is necessary for participation in a productivity programme, the Union, its officers and its representatives agree to give their full support and co-operation to the Company in the matter of securing improvement in labour productivity. For the purpose of doing so standard force in each department will be fixed by the Company in consultation with the Union.

(11) The Company assures the Union that: (a) There will be no retrenchment in the existing staff. (b) Those workers who are required for jobs other than those on which they are working, if not trained on the jobs will be so trained. (c) No such change will affect the average earnings of the employees.

The Union agrees that the details about this fixation of a standard force will be worked out by the management in each of the existing departments within a period of one year, from the date of this agreement. In case of any disagreement between the Union and the management regarding the number of hands in a department the matter shall be referred for arbitration to an independent expert mutually agreed upon by the Company and the Union, within a week's time. The decision of such an arbitrator will be binding on both the parties.

The Company will be entitled to leave any vacancy resulting from the above arrangement unfilled or to transfer the surplus men from any department to the other without affecting his status and wages.

(12) The Company and the Union agree that there are few jobs of similar designations, where certain inequalities in the wages exist and that it is desirable to simplify the structure of labour and wages in these particular jobs. It is, therefore, agreed that the central committee will select such jobs, and after it is done, will take into consideration the job evaluation of these jobs, for simplifying the structure as mentioned above. At that time it would be kept in view, that no decision affects the total wage bill of either of the parties except to a reasonable extent and suitable and easily understood system of payment by good piece work results is brought under consideration, because these results provide the workers an interest in the higher output along with maintenance of required quality. Such a thing will contribute effectively to the increased wages and productivity.

The committee will complete the whole job within a period of one year from the date of its formation.

(13) At the request of the Union, the Company as a gesture of goodwill, has already granted an increase in the wages of the unskilled hands drawing Rs. 2/2/- per day in certain cases and as the Union is pressing for some more hands of the same category who have been left out, the Company in the same spirit as expressed above agreed to bring all the unskilled hands drawing Rs. 2/2/- per day to Rs. 2/4/- per day from 6-3-56. After a period of six months the minimum wage will be raised to Rs. 2/5/- per day, the Union thereby agrees not to raise the issue of minimum wage in job evaluation. They further agree that all clerks whose pay is up to Rs. 110/- per month, and who have at least put in two years' service in the concern on the date of this agreement will be given a flat rate increment of Rs. 5/- per month from 6-3-56, subject to such marginal adjustment as may be necessary.

IV. PROMOTIONS.

(14) It is the established policy of the Company that in case of any vacancy occurring, the same shall be filled by internal promotions wherever possible rather than by recruitment from outside, so as to ensure a maximum opportunity for the employees with distinguished ability. The Union and the Company, therefore agree that the head of the department will make promotions, keeping in view, the provisions mentioned hereunder. Any grievance relating to this will be considered by the conciliation committee.

The same procedure will apply in case of Badlies for higher jobs provisions are as under:—(i) Seniority; (ii) Ability. In order to judge this, certain qualifications including education, technical experience, etc., will be prescribed. In order to secure the best possible justice a trade test may also be prescribed. (iii) Efficiency:—In order to judge this, previous service record will be kept in view. (iv) Health. (v) General suitability:—In this case general qualifications like personality, the control over workers' behaviour towards officers and workmen, and other matters may be presented. Promotions to the supervisory posts like those of the foremen and assistants in the department will be made by the Company at its discretion from outside or from amongst the existing staff.

V. BONUS.

(15) The Union and the Management have seen with interest the agreement recently entered into between the Millowners Association and Labour Association, Ahmedabad, with regard to the payment of Bonus, and they agree on principle that a scheme for payment of Bonus in this factory will be worked out by the Union and the Company keeping in view particularly the fact that the wages in the Modi Spinning and Weaving Mills are consolidated wages instead of basic wages, which is the basis of that agreement. The scheme will guarantee a minimum bonus every year. The scheme prepared will be binding on both parties.

(16) The Union and the Company agree on principle, that in case of the workmen falling a victim to malignant diseases like Tuberculosis and Cancer, during the employment, the Company agree to give suitable medical aid to such workmen for the period prescribed in the scheme, but till the time that the Employees State Insurance Scheme is not enforced in Modinagar and to allow compensatory help to such workmen, who are disabled from work due to these diseases. The Union and the Company also agree that the central committee will frame a scheme for carrying out the objects mentioned in this para prescribing the terms and conditions of the same.

VI. GRIEVANCE PROCEDURE.

(17) In order to maintain cordial relations between the Company and the employee it is always essential to have such a procedure for removing the grievance that the shortest possible time is taken to achieve the objective. At present there is existing a Conciliation Committee in the industry which has the recognition of the Provincial Government under the Industrial Disputes Act and it is doing good service to the parties but in order to make the system more exhaustive the Union and the Company here agree as under:—

Any grievance by a workman will first be reported by him to the shift assistant, and in case it is not redressed then to the departmental head. At his request the Union will assist him.

In case the grievance is not redressed by the above mentioned officers, it may be referred to the Joint Committee of the department.

For this purpose the Joint Committee set up under clause 9 for general problems will have the cognizance. In case the grievance is not redressed within a period of one week by the department the same will be referred to the Conciliation Committee existing at present in the factory.

Any decision made unanimously by the joint Committee will be binding on both the parties.

VII. GENERAL.

(18) The time limit prescribed for the Committee under this agreement for framing scheme or reports may be extended by mutual consent, in accordance with the exigencies of work.

(19) As the carrying out of the objectives mentioned in this agreement can be effective only if the parties concerned i.e., the Company as well as the Union and the workers follow the same with loyalty and in a spirit of mutual respect, both the parties undertake to follow it with sincerity to good labour management relations.

(20) The Union, therefore, agrees to co-operate with the Company in order to maintain discipline and avoiding waste of time by the employees.

(21) The Company agrees that while on the one hand no disciplinary action will be taken by the Company unless it be fair and just and arbitrary, on the other hand no action should be taken by the Union ignoring the procedure laid down in this agreement.

This Agreement shall remain in effect in the first instance for a period of three years. It may be amended at any time or extended after the above period by mutual consent. In case, any law or Government order having the force of law, is issued concerning any one of the subjects, covered by this agreement, the Union and the Company agree that this agreement shall stand modified to the extent to which that law or Government order applies to this factory.

ARTICLE IV—RIGHTS AND RESPONSIBILITIES.

5. It is agreed that the respective rights and prerogatives of the Management and the employees will be respected by both parties and that effective steps will be taken from both sides to discharge the joint responsibility towards fulfilment of objectives of this Agreement.
6. It is agreed that the Company will recognise the Indian Aluminium Belur Works Employees' Union as the sole collective bargaining agent of employees at Belur Works.
7. The Union accepts that it is the responsibility of the Management to maintain discipline and efficiency in the plant, and the right of the Management to hire, discipline and discharge employees for just cause and transfer and relieve employees from duty because of inefficiency or lack of work is expressly recognised subject to the right of appeal through the Grievance Procedure.

8. It is agreed that introduction of time standards and selection, placement and distribution of personnel are the responsibilities of the Management subject to the right of appeal through the Grievance Procedure.

9. It is agreed that the right to plan, direct and control operations of the plant, to introduce new or improved production methods, to expand production facilities and to establish production schedules and quality standards are solely and exclusively the responsibilities of the Management. The Management's authority to perform these and other duties will be respected in every case. In case any order issued in the discharge of these duties is considered a cause for grievance, workers should in the first instance obey the order and then proceed for the redress of the grievance in accordance with the Grievance Procedure.

10. It is agreed that it is the right of the Management to make such reasonable rules and regulations, not in conflict with this Agreement or any statute in force, as it may from time to time deem best for the purpose of maintaining order, safety or effective operation of the Company's work and to require compliance thereof by employees. Failure to comply with such rules and regulations will amount to punishable offence which will not be supported or encouraged by the Union.

11. It is agreed that it is the duty and the responsibility of the supervisory staff to utilise the men and machines at their disposal for getting production in the manner they think best consistent with the terms of this Agreement and that their orders and instructions will always be respected and complied with.

12. It is agreed that shift assignment, work allotment, transfer, promotion, demotion etc. shall be the responsibility of the Management provided however that when this amounts to a punishment remedies can be sought for through the constitutional Grievance Procedure.

13. It is agreed that the Management will not support or encourage any unfair labour practice and shall take effective steps to put a stop to such practice, if and when adopted and brought to the notice of the Management.

Interfering with right of employees to become or continue as members of the Union, discrimination, restraint or coercion against any employee because of membership in the Union, interfering with, restraining or coercing employees in the exercise of their rights to organise, form or join their Union or abusing authority to victimise an employee wrongfully and maliciously will be considered as unfair labour practice.

14. It is agreed that the Company will give all reasonable facilities to an authorised Union representative, whose name shall previously be intimated to the Management, to collect Union membership dues at his time near the Pay Counter on pay day.

15. It is agreed that the Company will allow Union members in Joint Committees to attend Joint Committee meetings and make field studies without loss of pay and give all reasonable facilities to authorised Union representatives to carry out their duties in the best interests of the employees so however that nothing shall be done which is detrimental to the normal and efficient operation of the Company's business. A Union representative required to leave the Works for this purpose may do so with the permission of the Departmental Head.

16. It is agreed that the Union will not support or encourage any unfair Union practice, e.g. utilising employees' official status to further Union activities, carrying on Union activities during working hours, divulging confidential information of the Company to the Union or outsiders, adopting unconstitutional methods for furtherance of Union demands, holding Union meetings within the factory premises, etc. Joining the Union will be a matter of free choice to the employees.

17. It is agreed that strict discipline will be maintained in the shops and in the offices and that violation of discipline will amount to a punishable offence which will not be encouraged or supported by the Union.

18. It is agreed that negligence of duty, careless operation, damage to Company's property, interfering with normal work, loitering aimlessly in the factory compound, offices or work places and causing disturbance to others, insubordination, indiscipline etc. will be deemed as punishable offences which will not be encouraged or supported by the Union.

19. It is agreed that the certified Standing Orders in force at present or as modified from time to time will be respected and violation of this will amount to a punishable offence which will not be supported or encouraged by the Union.

20. It is agreed that for the purpose of redress of grievances, constitutional procedure as laid down in the Grievance Procedure, described in Article XII of this Agreement, will be followed. Unconstitutional methods, e.g. demonstration, intimidation, coercion, violence, use of abusive languages, posting and distribution of unauthorised pamphlets or posters, wilful damage to the Company's property, slow-down of work etc. will not be adopted, supported or encouraged by the Union. Any employee or employees adopting such unconstitutional method or methods will be liable to punishment.

21. It is agreed that the Union shall give its full support and co-operation to the Company in the matter of securing improvement in labour productivity.

ARTICLE V—WAGES.

22. The Company shall pay wage rates in accordance with the Wage Schedule, now in force, prepared on the basis of Job Evaluation done by the Joint Job Evaluation Committee composed of representatives of both the Company and the Union and agreed to and accepted by both the parties. The Wage Schedule is given in Annexure I to this Agreement.

23. The wage scale of any job shall be the wage scale of the grade into which the job fits.

24. The job description, classification and wage scale for jobs in existence shall not be altered during the term of this Agreement unless the job value changes considerably as a result of a major change in the job character.

25. No basis shall exist for an employee to allege that a wage rate inequity exists and no grievance on behalf of an employee alleging a wage rate inequity shall be filed or processed during the term of this Agreement.

26. If and when any new job is created or job character of any of the existing jobs changes considerably warranting a re-evaluation, the wage scale will be established or modified, as the case may be, by Job Evaluation to be done by the Joint Job Evaluation Committee and additions or changes will be incorporated in the Wage Schedule. For this the procedure laid down below will be followed:

(a) Management will first prepare a job description for the purpose of evaluation. If the job description is considered faulty by the Union representatives, it will be discussed and if necessary revised following a field study as required.

(b) The Committee will make sure that the job is standardised or that it needs evaluation. No job will be taken up for evaluation until it is standardised.

(c) Each job will be analysed into eleven elements or factors, each covering five degrees representing respectively minimum, low, average, high and maximum. The factor and degree table is given below.

FACTORS		Degree Table
		1	2	3	4	5
(a) Experience and/or training period	...	35	70	105	140	175
(b) Responsibility and/or dependability	...	25	50	75	100	125
(c) Intelligence	...	25	50	75	100	125
(d) Mechanical ability	...	30	60	90	120	150
(e) Process Knowledge	...	20	40	60	80	100
(f) Motor accuracy and dexterity	..	13	26	39	52	65
(g) Education	...	8	16	24	32	40
(h) Personality or social skill	...	5	10	15	20	25
(i) Physical effort	...	13	26	39	52	65
(j) Hazard	...	18	36	54	72	90
(k) Working conditions	...	8	16	24	32	40
		200	400	600	800	1000

(d) The Secretary of the Committee will explain job description and characteristics and guide voting. Efforts will be made to get an agreement of views by free discussion and field inspection if necessary prior to voting. The members of the Committee will determine the demand for each of the elements or factors for the satisfactory performance of the job in terms of degrees given in the above table and give job values as points which will be recorded by the Secretary.

(e) The average points against factors rated by the voting members of the Committee will be totalled and the total compared with the total values of parallel or similar jobs already on the wage schedule. A re-evaluation if necessary will be made to fit the job in the proper grade consistent with justice and equity.

(f) A job will be fitted in the wage schedule on the basis of its final value thus determined and after approval by the Management.

27. If at any time a job is degraded as a result of re-evaluation, a worker on the job will continue to receive his current pay but the excess over the maximum pay in his grade will be treated as his personal pay. As he is promoted to higher grade jobs this personal pay will be gradually absorbed in the basic pay. His successor will not get the personal pay but only the wage rate for the job as fixed after revision.

ARTICLE VI—PRODUCTION STANDARDS AND STANDARD ALLOWANCE.

28. Standard rates of production and labour strength at different operation centres, determined by work study done by Joint Standards Committee and in force to-day, as given in the Annexure II to this Agreement are agreed to and adopted as final. Any change in standard rates of production or in labour strength at any operation centre if at any time considered necessary due to a major change in working conditions, process, product or method will only be made as a result of further work study.

29. For steady performance at standard rates of production at all machine centres giving an Overall Plant Efficiency of 100% and Overall Recovery of 55% the Company will pay a Standard Allowance to all employees at rates given below:

Productive Labour—30% of month's total earnings comprising of earnings as defined in Section 4(e) of Article III, acting allowance, holiday pay and annual leave pay.

Non-Productive Labour—15% of month's total earnings comprising of earnings as defined in Section 4(e) of Article III, acting allowance, holiday pay and annual leave pay.

Productive Staff—15% of month's total earnings comprising of earnings as defined in Section 4(e) of Article III, acting allowance, holiday pay and annual leave pay.

Non-Productive Staff—10% of month's total earnings comprising of earnings as defined in Section 4(e) of Article III, acting allowance, holiday pay and annual leave pay.

Workers belonging to the following categories, though non-productive, will be paid Standard Allowance at the rate of 20% of month's total earnings:

- (i) Millwright, Diesetter, Electrician, Sampler and Tester working in shift;
- (ii) their helpers working in shift.

30. If for any reason beyond the control of the Company or the employees it becomes necessary to drop output below the normal level, this will be done by making adequate reduction in machine shifts and labour strength or, if mutually agreed to, working days without affecting standard production rates, recovery and standard allowance or altering in any other way normal working conditions or terms of employment.

31. Standard rates of production and labour strength for any new machine if and when installed or for any new operation if and when introduced will be fixed by work study.

32. No job will be taken up for study until the operation is standardised and the work speed and working conditions are certified as satisfactory by the Department Head or his representative.

33. The duration of the study will be determined by the Joint Standards Committee under the advice of the Methods Department.

34. The standard rate of work shall be fixed at 75% of the maximum machine capacity as attainable with maximum worker effort under ideal conditions; in other words, scope to work with 33½% extra efficiency will exist under best conditions.

35. The data collected by study in the field will be recorded and analysed to determine the standard rates of work. The Standards Committee's recommendations will be forwarded to the Management for approval.

36. Once the standard rates have been agreed to and approved, these shall remain in force for all times subject to review and revision as warranted by a subsequent major change in working conditions, product, process or method.

37. On request from the Management or the Union, need for review or revision of a standard will first be discussed and determined in a meeting of the Joint Production Committee. On Joint Production Committee's recommendation to the Works Manager, Methods Department or Joint Standards Committee will be asked to re-study the work and recommend a revision if justified. On approval by the Management, the new standard will replace the old. Till such time as this is done the previously determined standard shall remain in force.

ARTICLE VII—BONUS.

38. The payment of bonus on Company's earnings or profits is not considered a sound or satisfactory principle by either party. It is felt by both the parties that relating bonus to production which is directly linked up with workers' effort is a better and more satisfactory principle. In consideration of the above it is agreed that bonus will not be related to Company's profits or earnings but will only be related to and paid on plant efficiency and output. Accordingly two bonus schemes which will run concurrently have been agreed to and accepted by both the parties. The Schemes are:

(a) Monthly Production Bonus Scheme. This is based on month's Overall Plant Efficiency and Recovery and is described in detail in Section 39 of this Article.

(b) Annual Productivity Bonus Scheme. This is based on total Bonus Year's output and is described in detail in Section 41 of this Article.

39. Monthly Production Bonus.

(a) For performance at efficiency above standard, calculated as "Overall Plant Efficiency" at 55% Overall Recovery for the month, the Company will pay monthly production bonus to productive workers at the following rates:—

For first 10% of extra efficiency above standard—1½% on total earnings comprising of earnings as defined in Section 4(e) of Article III and acting allowance, for each 1% extra efficiency.

For efficiency above this upto 15% extra efficiency—2% on total earnings for each 1% extra efficiency.

For efficiency above 15% upto 25% extra efficiency—2½% on total earnings for each 1% extra efficiency.

(b) Non-productive workers and productive staff will be paid at half rates and non-productive staff at quarter rates of bonus percentage paid to productive workers.

Workers belonging to the following categories, though non-productive, will be paid at two-third rates of bonus percentage paid to productive workers:

(i) Millwright, Diesetter, Electrician, Sampler and Tester working in shift;

(ii) their Helpers working in shift.

(c) Bonus earnings will vary with overall recovery, the actual bonus earnings for a month being the product of bonus earned at standard 55% recovery as per Sub-section (a) and (b) of this Section and recovery factor corresponding to the month's overall recovery as specified below:

Overall Recovery

40. All employees other than casual workers as defined in the Standing Orders and substitute staff members will be entitled to Monthly Production Bonus.

41. Annual Productivity Bonus.

(a) In addition to the Monthly Production Bonus the Company will pay Annual Productivity Bonus on total Output of the Bonus Year to its employees. The Annual Productivity Bonus payable will be determined from the graph in page number 38. This graph is a straight line graph with co-ordinates 'Total Bonus Year's Output' in tons and 'Annual Bonus' in percentage of Total Bonus Year's Earnings (comprising of earnings as defined in Section 4(e) of Article III, acting allowance and annual leave pay) and is formed by joining two fixed points, namely Bonus of 8.33% at output of 6000 tons and Bonus of 16.67% at output of 9000 tons and extending this line a point corresponding to 5000 tons output on the left and to a point corresponding to 10000 tons output on the right, these points limiting the minimum and maximum levels of output during any Bonus Year on which Annual Productivity Bonus will be paid during the term of this Agreement.

(b) Annual Bonus will be paid to each employee, entitled to this, on his total Bonus Year's earnings at rate determined by the point in the graph corresponding to the total output during the Bonus Year.

(c) It is agreed that if in any Bonus Year the total output drops below the desired level but not below a minimum level of 6000 tons for reasons beyond the control of the employees and the Union and in spite of their best efforts and full co-operation the Company will guarantee payment of Annual Bonus to all employees entitled to this @ 8½% of their total earnings during the year.

42. All employees other than casual workers as defined in the Standing Orders and substitute staff members and those who, having resigned or being discharged from the services of the Company, cease to be on the pay roll of Belur Works at the time of completion of the Bonus Year, will be entitled to Annual Productivity Bonus.

43. Shutdown of Plant due to Fire, Damage to Plant, etc.

It is agreed that the Company may at any time or times in the event of fire, breakdown of or damage to machinery, shortage of raw materials, shortage of orders, strike, lockout, Government control, action or regulation, force majeure, such as war, riot, civil commotion, communal disturbance, epidemic or other causes or circumstances beyond the control of the Company or the employees, stop any machine or machines, department or departments, wholly or partially for any period or periods and the bonus scheme will stand automatically suspended and inoperative from such date notified by the Company till those causes or circumstances are removed and normal operation is restored.

It is also agreed that on such notification by the Company, the Company may send all or any employee on leave with pay for the period due to each employee and without pay for the remaining portion of the shutdown period, or the Company may arrange disposal of employees on involuntary unemployment basis under the prevailing Acts, Rules or adjudication award, whichever is applicable at the time, if the stoppage is for reasons other than strike or lock-out. Bonus will be paid proportionately to output and working days.

44. Bonus Payment.

It is agreed that the Company will under all normal circumstances pay the monthly production bonus within fourteen days of the close of each month and the Annual Productivity Bonus in the month of September each year.

45. It is agreed that no bonus in any other form or on any other basis will be paid during the term of this Agreement.

ARTICLE VIII—OTHER BENEFITS.

Unless otherwise covered by terms of employment, the Company will continue to pay a Lunch Allowance of Rs. 1/8/- to all employees who will be on outside duty during lunch period and will thus not be able to take meal at the Works Canteen.

49. Night Shift Tiffin.

The Company will supply from its Canteen free tiffin (costing five annas per head per day) to all workers working in the night shift i.e. 10 p.m. to 6 a.m. during their periods of rest which shall be taken between work periods as scheduled.

50. Sick Benefit.

In consideration of the financial loss the employees covered by the Employees State Insurance Scheme may suffer for the first two days of sickness which is considered as Waiting Period for which no cash benefit is payable by the Employees' State Insurance Corporation, the Company agrees to pay special sick allowance for these two days at half wage rate to workers and for one day at full pay to staff on submission of a medical certificate from a panel doctor. The Company will continue to run the contributory Provident Fund Scheme in existence and each employee will be a member of the fund after six months' continuous service with the Company or from the date of his joining the Company if he is already a member of any Employees' Provident Fund constituted under the Employees' Provident Fund Act, 1952. The employee will contribute $6\frac{1}{4}\%$ of his earnings and the Company will contribute an equal amount. Details of the Scheme are embodied in the Company's Provident Fund Rules.

Gratuity.

52. The Company agrees to introduce a Gratuity Scheme for the employees from January 1st, 1957, as a further retiral benefit to the existing Provident Fund.

(3) The scheme will not be applicable to apprentices, trainees and persons employed through contractors.

ARTICLE X—LEAVE AND HOLIDAYS

(c) For monthly-paid salaried employees, for whom these will be paid holidays, 4 days will be deducted from the 7 days casual leave due to them.

ARTICLE XI—JOINT CONSULTATION.

57. It is agreed by both the parties that solution of problems and settlement of disputes and grievances can be best achieved by joint consultation which also contributes towards better understanding and relations. In consideration of the above and in view of the experience of the working of Joint Committees in the past, five Joint Committees, viz. Joint Personnel Relations Committee, Joint Production Committee, Joint Job Evaluation Committee, Joint Standards Committee and Joint Canteen Committee, established under the first Agreement between the Company and the Union are hereby re-established for the term of this Agreement. It is agreed that any other Joint Committee or Committees will be established if and when considered necessary.

58. Composition and functions of these different committees are given below:

(a) Joint Personnel Relations Committee comprises of equal number of members nominated by the Company and the Union.

The function of this Committee is to evaluate jobs for fitting into the Wage Schedule.

(d) Joint Standards Committee comprises of competent representatives nominated by the Company and the Union.

The function of this Committee is to make work study, recommend standard rate of performance and labour strength and help attainment of these standards where necessary.

(e) Joint Canteen Committee comprises of representatives of the Company and the Union.

The function of this Committee is to discuss and recommend measures to improve canteen efficiency and service.

59. All Joint Committees are consultative and advisory in character and have no executive authority.

60. No one shall be eligible to serve as a member of any Joint Committee unless he is in Company's employment at Belur Works.

61. Joint Committee members will be entitled to leave their work without loss of pay, after obtaining permission from their departmental head, to attend meetings or to make field study. It is agreed that the time will be devoted for Committee's work only and will not be abused in any way.

ARTICLE XII—REDRESS OF GRIEVANCES.

62. It is agreed that Grievances will be settled expeditiously at the lowest level and only when this is not possible will this be handled and settled at higher levels.

63. For this purpose the Union will nominate 'Shop Stewards' from amongst the workers in different sections and shifts to represent workmen's grievances according to the Grievance Procedure and forward a list of names of Shop Stewards so nominated to the Management and intimate changes as and when they take place.

64. Grievances will be handled in accordance with the Grievance Procedure laid down below:

(1) The worker in person will first take up his grievance with his Supervisor.

(2) If the worker is not satisfied with the decision of the Supervisor or fails to receive an answer from him within 24 hours (one working day), he will take the grievance to the Foreman.

(3) If the decision of the Foreman is not satisfactory or an answer is not received from him within 24 hours (one working day), the worker accompanied by his Shop Steward will present his grievance to the Department Superintendent. Up to this point the communication will be verbal.

(4) If the decision of the Superintendent is not satisfactory or if no reply is received from him within 48 hours (2 working days), a Grievance Note will be filled up by the worker or his Shop Steward and forwarded to the Personnel Superintendent.

(5) The Personnel Superintendent, on receipt of the Grievance Note, will make necessary entries in the Grievance Register. He will then forward the Grievance Note to the Department Superintendent concerned for his comments.

(6) The Department Superintendent will return the Grievance Note to Personnel Superintendent with his comments.

(7) The Personnel Superintendent, on receipt of the Grievance Note, will be in a position to settle the grievance fairly and satisfactorily on basis of the facts obtained, supplemented by discussions with persons involved and personal investigation if necessary. If the grievance is found to be genuine, the Personnel Superintendent will take steps to have this redressed. If, however, the grievance is found to be false and malicious, he will take disciplinary action against the complainant.

(8) In case the Personnel Superintendent is not in a position to settle the case satisfactorily, he will refer it to the Joint Personnel Relations Committee. Before doing that he will consult the Personnel Data of the complainant and make necessary entries in the Grievance Note.

(9) The Joint Personnel Relations Committee, on receipt of the Grievance Note, will make a careful and objective study of the case and make its recommendations to the Personnel Superintendent.

(10) The Personnel Superintendent will then take steps to settle the case or, if necessary, forward it to the Works Manager.

(11) The Works Manager, on reviewing the case, will issue instructions in writing and return the Grievance Note to the Personnel Superintendent.

(12) The Personnel Superintendent will implement the instructions of the Works Manager and will inform in writing the complainant or his Shop Steward with copies to persons concerned about the final decision of the Management.

(13) If the decision of the Works Manager is not considered satisfactory, or if no reply is received from the Management within 15 working days from the date of submission of the Grievance Note, the employee or the Union has a right to refer the case to State Labour Directorate, as provided by the existing legislation, or to take such other constitutional action as the employee or the Union thinks fit.

65. Steps 1, 2, 3 and 4 will be taken up by the complainant or his Shop Steward during his scheduled period of rest. If it is necessary for the workman to leave the department during working hours on a call from the Personnel Superintendent or any other Officer or the Joint Personnel Relations Committee, previous permission of Foreman or Superintendent of the department must be obtained.

66. The Management will see that all grievances are considered carefully and processed promptly in accordance with the procedure described above.

67. The Union will see that only genuine grievances are brought by workers to the notice of the Management and that unnecessary waste of time is avoided in handling grievances which are purely imaginary. A false complaint lodged with the purpose of undermining the prestige of a superior Officer or stirring up agitation will affect the interest of the complainant adversely and in case the complaint is malicious, disciplinary action will be taken against the complainant. It is understood that the grievance machinery is not meant to supplement the Union's bargaining activities for which a separate course of action is prescribed.

ARTICLE XIII—GENERAL.

68. It is agreed that when any machine or man or group of men is idle due to lack of work, mechanical breakdown or any other cause or causes or when it is deemed necessary to stop any kind of work and do some other kind of work the workers will be transferred from one job to another or from one section to another, as directed by the Supervisory Staff.

69. It is agreed that in order to maintain production at a uniformly high level and to prevent breakdown of machines and consequent stoppages of work the procedure for preventive maintenance programme as laid down by the Engineering Department will be rigidly followed by the workmen concerned and that they will be present on duty as and when called upon to do so in order that production or life of machines is not adversely affected.

70. It is agreed that bottlenecks existing anywhere will be cleared off by extra effort and/or extra work on Sundays and holidays so as to maintain an even flow of material through the plant and that Remelt and/or Hot Mill will work on Sundays and/or Holidays as required for meeting sheet mill demand or for building up adequate stock of rolling ingots or hot rolled slabs prior to remelt furnace or hot mill shutdown.

71. It is agreed that the present practice of recruiting workers of Grade I, other than those hired for casual purpose or for expansion work, from amongst employees' relatives and refugees in proportion 3:1 and of higher categories in non-productive group by free recruitment from any available source and in productive group by promotion from within, as far as practicable, will be continued without any change.

72. It is agreed that promotion of workers will be governed by consideration of merit, service record and seniority. The same consideration will also apply in the case of lay off or retrenchment of skilled workers or temporary or casual workers. In case any action taken in this connection is considered as a cause of grievance, redress can be sought for through the Grievance Procedure.

73. It is agreed that for lay off or retrenchment of permanent workers belonging to unskilled or semi-skilled category for any reason beyond the control of the Company or the employees, workers belonging to the particular department or section or category where there is redundancy will be retrenched on 'last come first go' basis, unless otherwise agreed to mutually.

74. Since this Agreement provides for the orderly and amicable settlement and adjustment of any and all disputes, differences and grievances, it is agreed that the Union will not initiate, authorise, sanction, support or engage in any strike, stoppage or slow-down of work and that the Company will not declare lock-out during the term of this Agreement. A case of any unauthorised strike, slow-down or stoppage by any employee or employees will not be supported by the Union and the offender(s) will be liable to strong disciplinary action which may amount to summary dismissal.

75. It is agreed that there shall be no demand for any further increase in wage, allowance or bonus or any other financial or non-financial benefit and that the provisions of this Agreement fully define and limit the obligations and responsibilities of the Management towards its employees for the period covered by this Agreement.

ARTICLE XIV—TERMINATION.

76. This Agreement terminates and supersedes the Agreement of March 14th, 1951.

77. This Agreement shall continue in full force and effect without any change for a period of five years from the first day of September Nineteen Hundred and Fifty-six to the Thirty-first day of August Nineteen Hundred and Sixty-one and shall continue in effect thereafter until amended by mutual agreement or terminated by either party by written notice of at least one calendar month to the other party.

78. In the event that any of the provisions of this Agreement becomes legally invalid or unenforceable or superseded by a subsequent Act, Award or Order, such invalidity, unenforceability or supersession shall not affect the remainder of the provisions of the Agreement.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF the parties hereto have caused their names to be subscribed by their duly authorised Officers and representatives the day and year first above written.

¹ The Resolution on Industrial Truce adopted at the Industries Conference held at Delhi in December 1947 recommended, inter alia, the formation of Unit Production Committees in industrial establishments for promoting the efficiency of workers and improving production. Under the Industrial Policy Resolution of 6th April, 1948, the Central Government proposed the setting up of bipartite Production Committees consisting of representatives of employers and workers. The matter was discussed at the first meeting of the Central Advisory Committee on Labour held at Lucknow in November 1948 and on the basis of its recommendation, a modified draft model constitution was prepared by the Central Government and circulated to the different employers' associations with a request to take all possible steps to enable the existing Works Committees to function also as Production Committees and also to constitute Unit Production Committees, on a voluntary basis.

(f) Workers' Representatives.—Representatives of the Workers shall be elected from amongst the workers employed in the undertaking or factory and shall cover as far as possible the different sections, branches, shops or departments of the undertaking or factory.

SUGGESTED CONSTITUTION AND FUNCTIONS OF WORKS COMMITTEE¹

The differing circumstances of different industries make it impossible to devise any scheme suitable to every industry. Again, the type of Works Committee suitable will vary with the size of the firm and the form taken by organisation among the employees. In preparing a scheme, therefore, the machinery outlined in the following suggestions may require to be adapted in greater or lesser degree if the general objects for which Works Committees are recommended are to be attained. At the same time, anything that is done—whether or not it is embodied in the Works Rules drawn up by the Works Committee—must be consistent with the principles of the collective agreements accepted by the District and National Authorities. For this reason steps should be taken to secure the closest possible connection between the Works Committee and the District and National Councils.

OBJECTS.

1. The object of the Works Committee is to provide a recognised means of consultation between the management and the employees, and

(i) to give the employees a wider interest in and greater responsibility for the conditions under which their work is performed.

(ii) to enforce the regulations contained in collective agreements drawn up by District and National Authorities,

(iii) to prevent friction and misunderstanding.

FUNCTIONS.

2. Matters to be dealt with by the Works Committee shall include:—

(This list of functions is not meant to be exhaustive. Almost every industry has rules or customs which arise from the particular conditions under which the work of the industry is carried on (e.g., the payment of "dirty money," provision of tools, allowances for working away from the works or from home, allowances on standard district piece prices for deficiencies in material or machinery, &c.). In a well-regulated industry many such matters will be subject to district or national agreements, and the powers of a Works Committee will be limited in the same manner as they will be in regard to the more general questions of district or national agreement (standard rates, piece prices, normal hours, overtime, &c.). No attempt has been made to include such questions as arise only in some industries, for which each National Council concerned will have to decide upon a method of regulation, including the powers to be vested in Works Committees.)

(a) The issue and revision of works rules.

(b) The distribution of working hours; breaks; time recording, &c.

(c) The method of payment of wages (time, form of pay ticket, &c.); explanation of methods of payment; the adjustment of piece prices, subject to district or national agreements; records of piece prices; deductions, &c.

(d) The settlement of grievances.

(e) Holiday arrangements.

(f) Questions of physical welfare (provision of meals, drinking water, lavatories and washing accommodation, cloakrooms, ventilation, heating, lighting and sanitation; accidents, safety appliances, first aid, ambulance, &c.).

(g) Questions of discipline and conduct as between management and workpeople (malingering; bullying; time keeping; publicity in regard to rules; supervision of notice boards, &c.).

(h) Terms of engagement of workpeople.

(i) The training of apprentices and young persons.

(j) Technical library; lectures on the technical and social aspects of the industry.

(k) Suggestions of improvements in method and organisation of work; the testing of suggestions.

(l) Investigation of circumstances tending to reduce efficiency or in any way to interfere with the satisfactory working of the factory.

(m) Collections (for clubs, charities, &c.).

(n) Entertainments and sports.

(o) The provision of facilities for the employees' side of the Joint Committee (or of a departmental committee, if any) to conduct its own work.

(It may be found necessary to leave certain questions to be settled not by the whole Works Committee, but by a sub-committee of it on which the workers' representatives are drawn only from the particular department or section directly concerned, for example, a piecework question in one department of a works which is mainly on timework. The size of the works, also, is a factor which must be taken into account in considering the need for sub-committees. In some instances departmental sub-committees and in others functional sub-committees (e.g., a "Safety" Committee or a Welfare Committee) may best suit the circumstances. Even where definite sub-committees are not arranged for, work of the same kind as these would perform may often be carried out by consultation between the representatives of the management and the secretary of the workers' side, along with the representatives of a department.)

3. The Works Committee shall not have any power to come to an agreement inconsistent with the powers or decisions of the District or National Councils or with any agreement between a trade union and the employers' association. Further, any agreement come to by a Works Committee may at any time be superseded by the District or National Council or by agreement between a trade union and the employers' association.

CONSTITUTION.

4. The Works Committee shall consist of members, of whom shall represent the management and shall represent the employees.

(To have an equal number of members on the two sides would in most works be impracticable, and, in view of the suggested procedure, is unnecessary. The number required on the management side will vary, but 2, 3 or 4 is suggested as a suitable number. The number of employees' representatives will vary with the size and complexity of the particular works. Some number from 5 to 12 is suggested as likely to suit most circumstances.)

5. Either side shall have the right to add to its numbers representatives of the particular departments or sections of departments affected by a question under discussion and not directly represented on the Committee. The addition shall be made only for the period during which the question affecting the particular departments or sections of departments is before the Committee.

6. The representatives of the Management on the Committee shall be appointed by the firm.

(Certain members of the managerial staff should form a constant nucleus of the management side. This nucleus should be made up of such individuals as a Managing Director, the Works Manager, and, where there is such an official, the Labour or Welfare Superintendent.)

7. The employees' side of the Works Committee shall be Trade Union members, elected as hereinafter provided.

(The National and District Councils are based solely upon the representation of organisations. In the case of the works, in order to secure cohesion of policy as between the Works Committee and the District and National Councils, it is advisable that the Works Committee should normally be based on a recognition of the workpeople's organisations. But, in particular factories where the employees are not strongly organised, or where the functions of the Works Committee are such as to require the presence of workers who are not organised, it may be found necessary to depart from the principle laid down above. In these circumstances, however, the shop stewards, or other trade union representatives in the works, should be consulted on all questions affecting district or national agreements. Any deviation from the general scheme should be adopted only after approval by the Industrial Council on a consideration of the merits of the case.)

8. Employee members shall hold office for a period of 12 months ending on the day of in each year. On any representative leaving the employment of the firm or resigning his position as member, a successor shall be appointed in the ordinary way by the department or section concerned, to hold office for the remainder of the term.

ELECTIONS.

9. Elections of employees' representatives on the Works Committee shall be held in the month of in each year.

(Each works should draw up a scheme of constituencies and a method of election to suit its own particular conditions. It is suggested that a provisional committee should be appointed for this purpose. The representation should normally be on the basis of departments, due allowance being made for the various sections of workers engaged in any department. In order that this may not sometimes necessitate a Committee of unwieldy size, it is suggested that for large or complex works the employees' side of the Joint Committee should be appointed by and from a larger body of workers' representatives elected from the various departments. In large works it will probably be found desirable to establish departmental committees, with a Works Committee representative of all the departments chosen from the departmental committees. In such cases, the functions of the departmental committees will be confined to matters affecting the department only, whilst the Works Committee will consider questions affecting more than one department or the whole works. The workers' side of a departmental committee should be so elected as to give representation to each of the various sections of workers engaged in the department.)

10. The election should be by ballot, or by departmental or sectional meetings specially convened for the purpose.

11. A serving member of the Committee shall be eligible for re-election.

OFFICERS.

12. The Works Committee shall appoint a Chairman and a Vice-Chairman from the two sides respectively. Each side shall appoint its own Secretary.

PROCEDURE.

13. Meetings of the Works Committee shall be held at regular intervals of (two/four) weeks. The meetings shall be held during working hours.

14. Special meetings of the Works Committee shall be called at _____ hours' notice on a request on behalf of one side by its secretary to the secretary of the other side.

15. The agenda of business shall be submitted by the secretaries to each member of the Committee at least _____ hours before a meeting, except in the case of special meetings.

16. No business other than that appearing on the agenda shall be transacted at any meeting unless both sides agree to its introduction.

17. When an individual employee desires to bring any question before the Committee, he or she should report to his or her departmental or sectional representative, who in the case of grievances shall endeavour to reach a settlement. Failing a settlement, the representative shall inform the employees' secretary. The latter shall endeavour to arrange a settlement. Failing a settlement, the question shall come before the Works Committee.

18. In the course of his duties the secretary of the employees' side should have the right to enter any department in the works, and the representative of any department or section the right to enter the department in which the secretary is at work.

19. Facilities should be provided for meetings of the employees' side of the Committee in the works, normally after working hours or during meal hours.

20. The workers' representatives should be paid at their ordinary rate for time spent at meetings of the Works Committee.

21. Duplicate books of minutes should be kept, one by the Secretary of each side.

22. Copies of the minutes of all meetings of the Works Committee must be sent to the Secretaries of the District Council within 7 days of the date of meeting.

23. Decisions shall be arrived at only by agreement between the two sides.

24. The presence of _____ members from each side of the Committee shall be necessary to form a quorum.

25. In the event of any matter arising which the Committee cannot agree upon, the officials of the trade union or unions concerned shall negotiate with the firm, or, if desired, with the officials of the employers' association. The question may thereafter be referred by either side to the District Council.

26. The recognised district official of any trade union or employers' association concerned may attend any meeting in an advisory capacity.
